COPY “ of CORRESPONDENCE between the Chancellor of the Exchequer and the Governors of the Bank of England.”

LETTER from the Chancellor of the Exchequer to the Governor and Deputy Governor of the Bank of England.

Gentlemen,

Downing-street, 31 January 1861.

HER Majesty's Government have had under their consideration the following Report of Sir Alexander Spearman, Mr Arbuthnot, and Mr. Anderson, dated 19th November 1860, on the expenses incurred by the Bank of England in conducting certain duties on behalf of the public in connexion with the issue of notes, the care of the public balances, and the management of the National Debt. Government considers that this Report should be submitted to Parliament, and it is to be desired that on producing it, they should be prepared at once to state and to act upon the view which they take of its contents.

I accordingly proceed to lay that view before you, following herein the precedent furnished by the conduct of my predecessors in office at former periods, and the course most agreeable both to the intimate relations which have ever prevailed between the Government and the Bank, and to the character of the weighty duties performed by the Bank on behalf of the State.

I commence by adverting to the two former of the three important subjects opened in this report, namely, the expenses and profits connected with the issue of notes, and with the custody and use of the public balances.

On neither of these subjects do Her Majesty's Government deem it their duty to submit any proposal to Parliament.

The profits connected with issue they do not regard as upon the whole a desirable subject for legislation, otherwise than in connexion with issue itself. They were so treated in 1844, and they were left upon a footing, with respect to any renewal of the question, which Her Majesty's Government see no reason to disturb.

In like manner with regard to the advantages connected with the use of the balances. This point was fully considered in the correspondence of 1844 between the Government and the Bank.

Mr. Goulburn stated the views of the advisers of the Crown, and reserved the discretion of the State as to a participation in the profits of the public deposits, should they, from any circumstances undergo material increase or reach an extraordinary amount; while the Bank reserved its freedom to consider what its own rights might be in the event of their reduction. The subject was, we think, judiciously handled on both sides; the case contemplated by Mr. Goulburn has not arisen, and we propose to leave it, in this point also, as it was left by the correspondence presented to Parliament in 1844.

I have, however, to subjoin to what I have now stated, a qualification of limited extent. The Committee of the House of Commons on Public Monies, which reported in 1858, recommended the abolition of deficiency bills, and the substitution, in cases of deficiency, of advances in a different and simpler form, together with a change in the basis on which such deficiency was to be calculated.

It is the intention of Her Majesty's Government to propose, in the coming Session, legislation in general conformity with the tenor of these recommendations; but I have mentioned the subject in this place rather with a view to strict accuracy, than because it is of any great moment in the adjustment of the pecuniary relations between the Government and the Bank.

With respect to the third and remaining subject, the management of the National Debt, the Government conceive that the time has come when they may justly call upon Parliament to reconsider the rates of charge fixed by the Act of 1808, and still substantially in force, although, as matter of account, reduced by the payments which the Bank makes to the State to the extent of 188,078*l.* per annum in respect of composition for Stamp Duties and of profit on the issue of notes.

The Act of 1808 assigned to the Bank, as a remuneration for its charges and its responsibilities in the management of the National Debt, an annual sum of 340 l. per million up to the limit of 600 millions, and an annual sum of 300 l. per million beyond that limit, with a proviso for a rate of payment of 450 l. per million, in case the Debt should at any time stand at less than 400 millions. It is also provided that Terminable Annuities shall be reckoned at 25 years' purchase.

Referring to the several communications which I have had the honour of holding with you, I shall waive all argument upon this subject, and shall simply proceed to state the particulars of the changes which the Government think may reasonably and advantageously be introduced into the subsisting arrangements.

I. We propose to ask Parliament to enact that a new plan shall take effect from the commencement of the next financial year, and shall remain in force for 25 years certain.

II. The method of set-off by which the Bank gives credit on account of profits of issue and of stamp duty composition to the State, and deducts the amount so credited from its charge for the debt, was in conformity with the system under which the public revenue was managed and accounted for at the date of the subsisting arrangements. But in 1854 an Act was passed, which provided for the payment into the Exchequer of the gross revenue of the State. Agreeably to the spirit of that Act, Her Majesty's Government are of opinion that the sum of 188,078*l.* allowed by the Bank should no longer stand as a deduction from its charge against the public, but that the sum of 60,000*l.*, being the composition for stamp duties, should be paid to the department of Inland Revenue, and the sum of 128,078*l.* being the allowance out of profits of issue, should be paid to the Exchequer as part of the miscellaneous revenues of the country. The charge for the management of the debt would then stand as a separate and distinct charge, and would be defrayed, under an Act for the purpose, out of the Consolidated Fund.

III. It seems evident that the valuation of Terminable Annuities is, by much, too high. A public annuity, granted for 99 years, would be worth something more than 25 years' purchase at its inception; but its value would descend in a vanishing series to zero, and the mean value of it would probably lie between 12 and 15 years. Annuities granted for shorter terms would represent subjects for commercial dealing of proportionably narrower scope. And the comparatively limited nature of the market for these annuities would make it probable, that they would be managed at an inferior cost in relation to their value. Under these circumstances, it is the opinion of Her Majesty's Government that all Terminable Annuities henceforward granted by Parliament should, for the purposes of Bank management, be valued as follows:

If originally granted for more than 50 years, at 15 years' purchase.

If for any lesser term, at 10 years' purchase.

IV. Before I come to the rate of allowance to be made to the Bank for the management of the debt, I have to propose a somewhat different adjustment of the present graduated plan, with a view to giving greater fixity to the arrangements now contemplated during the time for which they are to last.

The Bank now receives the greater part of its remuneration, namely, that on 600 millions of debt, at 340 l. per million; and only 136 millions at the lower rate of 300 l. per million. Now the outlay of the Bank in connexion with this branch of its business does not appear to vary greatly with the minor variations in the amount of the debt, whether upwards or downwards. For the bulk of the debt it must keep its premises, and the bulk of the establishment.

We therefore propose, and we confidently anticipate the concurrence of the Bank in proposing, that the great bulk of the remuneration also should be placed on the first 600 millions of the debt; or, more specifically, that the rate per

per million, not exceeding 600 millions, instead of, as now, being but slightly greater than the rate above it, should be double that rate.

Thus, the effect of any changes that might be adopted by Parliament in the form of the public debt would become comparatively of small importance to the Bank as a trading establishment.

V. With respect to the rate of remuneration, we propose to introduce a Bill into Parliament which shall fix prospectively, as the rate of remuneration, the sum of 300 l. for the first 600 millions of the debt, and of 150 l. for the excess beyond 600 millions. The payment of 4,000 l. per annum, termed House-money, and the payment of 1,579 l. on account of South Sea debt, to cease and determine.

The effect of this proposal will be to place the annual remuneration to the Bank on the present amount of debt, in round numbers, at about 200,000 l. a year. The dormant provision of the present law, under which the Bank would be entitled to a payment of 450 l. per million, if the debt under their management were reduced below 400 millions, is one which Her Majesty's Government see no reason to disturb.

To a proposal of this nature Her Majesty's Government are in hopes that Parliament would be induced to give the sanction of its authority; and on the other hand, they trust that the authorities of the Bank will deem it one affording to them a just and adequate remuneration for the important services which they have performed, we believe to the entire satisfaction of the public, under such regulations as are now in force regarding them.

In conclusion, I have to add that it will be eminently satisfactory to Her Majesty's Government, and will also be agreeable to the spirit in which the Bank of England adjusts itself to the demands of commerce and of monetary transactions, if you should be able to assure me of the intention of the Bank to afford increased facilities for business, such as would be supplied by a material contraction of the periods of shutting, if they cannot be dispensed with altogether; and also with respect to the payment of the dividends to the holders, wherever the Bank may have branch establishments.

I have, &c.

LETTER from the Governor and Deputy Governor of the Bank of England to the Chancellor of the Exchequer.

Sir,

Bank of England, 6 February 1861.

WE have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 31st ultimo, which we have submitted to the consideration of the Court of Directors, and they have resolved to recommend to the Court of Proprietors to accept the proposals of Her Majesty's Government, contained in the letter of the Chancellor of the Exchequer, dated the 31st January 1861, for regulating the remuneration to the Bank of England for the management of the National Debt, for the period of 25 years.

As these proposals involve a very considerable reduction in what has always been regarded as only an adequate remuneration for the services performed and the risks incurred, the Court of Directors desire to express to Her Majesty's Government that they are induced to accede to this reduction, mainly because the combined management of the National Debt, and of the collateral departments of issue and banking, enable them to exercise a very important economy in the labour charge, and in the other expenses of Bank administration.

The Directors will also be prepared to make arrangements for facilitating transfers in the public funds, by limiting the closing of the books to the shortest period possible; but for this purpose the authority of Parliament will be necessary; and in regard to the payment of dividends to the fundholder at places where the Bank has branches, the views of Her Majesty's Government shall be carried out to the utmost practicable extent.

We have, &c.

Alfred Latham, Deputy Governor.

RESOLUTION of the Court of Proprietors.

At a Court of Proprietors, held at the Bank on Thursday the 7th February 1861,

Resolved,

That this Court concurs in the recommendation of the Court of Directors, to accede to the proposals of Her Majesty's Government, contained in the letter of the Chancellor of the Exchequer, dated 31st January last, addressed to the Governor and Deputy Governor of the Bank of England, for regulating the remuneration to the Bank of England for the management of the National Debt, for the period of 25 years.

REPORT of Sir Alexander Y. Spearman, Bart., Mr. Arbuthnot, and Mr. Anderson, referred to in the Letter of the Chancellor of the Exchequer to the Governor and Deputy Governor of the Bank of England, at page 1.

Sir,

Treasury Chambers, 19 November 1860.

IN compliance with your desire that we should review the results of an inquiry into the relations between the Government and the Bank of England, which was undertaken in the year 1854 under your directions, especially as regards the remuneration received by the Bank for its important and valuable services in the transaction of certain branches of the public business, and that we should now present a revised report, bringing down the facts to the present day, we beg to submit for your consideration the results of our renewed inquiry in the following report, in which we have incorporated the entire substance of the former report:—

We have obtained from the Bank various accounts showing the expenses incurred by them; but before we submit them under their proper heads, it is necessary that we should point out that as the whole business of the Bank, both public and private, is conducted by one establishment, the apportionment of the expense applicable to each branch of duty can only be made by estimate. It is necessary that we should also state, in reference to this estimated apportionment, that although the figures represent an accurate return of the expenses incurred by the Bank for each branch of business conducted by them on behalf of the public, it is evident that the public business could not be dis-united from the private business of the Bank without an increase of cost; and that this cost would be still further augmented if the different departments were separately conducted, inasmuch as the facilities, which a large establishment affords, of economising labour by directing it wherever a pressure of business may, from time to time, arise, would be considerably lessened in divided establishments.

In regard to salaries, the establishment of officers and clerks being divided into separate offices, with defined duties allotted to each, there is no difficulty, in the majority of cases, in assigning them to their proper divisions; but in some offices,—the chief cashier's and the chief accountant's, for instance,—the duties are general; in such cases we have taken the apportionment from the estimates furnished by the chief officer of each branch. As to the other expenses, some can be assigned at once to their proper divisions of business; others, being general, can be appropriated only upon estimate. The rule followed in these cases has been to divide them in the same ratio as the salaries. We believe that the accounts present a very correct approximation to the actual cost of conducting each separate branch of business.

The aggregate sum estimated by the Bank for rent amounts to 70,000 l., including 10,000 l. for the branches. Of this sum the public is charged with 50,206 l. The estimate for the rent of the Bank buildings in London is 60,000 l. a year, including 19,794 l. for the private business of the Bank. This sum is the valuation, by the Bank architect, of the area and buildings of the Bank, as compared with those of other establishments in the immediate neighbourhood.

This item appears to be an increasing one, for we find that the rent now estimated at 70,000 l. a year, was returned to the Committee on the Bank Charter, Charter, in 1832, at 35,000 l., with 5,000 l. a year for the use of fixtures. It will be seen by the Report of that Committee that this was taken on the valuation of the late Sir John Soane, at that time the architect of the Bank of England.

We have annexed to this report a plan of the Bank buildings, showing the area at present occupied by the departments of the Bank engaged on the public business. Appendix, No. 1.

We have divided the expenses incurred by the Bank in conducting the public business under the three following heads:—

- 1st. Public Accounts.
- 2d. Public Debt.
- 3d. Issue Department.

1st. THE MANAGEMENT OF THE PUBLIC ACCOUNTS.

In the management of these accounts the Bank discharges simply the functions of the bankers of the Government.

Their duties are confined to the receipt and payment of money on various accounts of revenue and expenditure, and they do not differ materially from those of any other banker.

Although some of the returns required from the Bank by the public departments are more detailed and formal than bankers are usually called upon to furnish to their customers, we do not think that the public accounts in the aggregate occasion more labour, cost, and responsibility, in proportion to their number and amount, than any other accounts.

The cost at which this portion of the Government business was conducted is as follows for the year to 31st August 1860:—

Salaries (London) - - - - -	£. 8,737
Salaries (Branches) - - - - -	3,824	£.
		12,561.
Pensions - - - - -	- - - - -	1,130
Directors' allowance - - - - -	- - - - -	410
Rent (London) - - - - -	£. 2,850
Rent (branches) - - - - -	733
		3,583
Repairs - - - - -	- - - - -	1,200
Rates, tithes, and taxes - - - - -	- - - - -	321
Stationery and other charges - - - - -	- - - - -	1,204
	£.	20,409

There is no item in this account which calls for special remark. The expenses of the branch banks are incurred wholly on account of the collection of the public revenue. The Bank sends clerks to those districts which are easily accessible from London or from the branches, to receive from the collectors the revenue collected from Taxes and Excise. The sums so received by the Bank clerks are placed to the credit of the Government as soon as the cheques and bills are realized; and the agency of the Bank in these collections is very beneficial to the public, both in saving interest of money and in avoiding the risk of loss.

The following is a statement of revenue returned, &c., by the Bank of England, in the current year:—

Amount collected - - - - -	14,767,010	-	-
Amount advanced to collectors - - - - -	113,910	-	-
	£. 14,880,920	-	-
Number of miles*travelled - - - - -	138,364

Number of days employed - - - - -	2,696
Amount of Property Tax returned - - -	£. 6,564,182 - -
Sum received for expenses of that collection at 1/ per cent. - - - - -	£. 3,282 1 10
Amount of customs received by the branch banks -	£. 5,123,603 - -

The remuneration to the Bank for the care of the public accounts is derived from the use of the public balances; and this, while it is the usual, appears also to be the best form in which that remuneration can be given, provided it is confined within proper limits. There is, however, no definite understanding between the Government and the Bank, as to the extent to which the balances may be reduced without giving the Bank a claim to compensation, nor as to the accumulation of public deposits which shall give the Government a claim to participate in the profits arising from them; in fact, no claim has ever been made on either side.

In the correspondence which took place between the Government and the Bank, in 1844, the Chancellor of the Exchequer stated, however, on behalf of the Government, that they retained an unfettered discretion as to the amount of public deposits to be left in the hands of the Bank; and that in the event of any extraordinary accumulation of such balances, it was competent to them to make arrangements with the Bank for participating in the profits of such deposits;* but this understanding between the Government and the Bank was never clearly developed and brought to a practical solution. It will therefore remain for consideration whether, in communication with the Bank authorities at present, or in the event of any renewal of the Bank Act, any and what definite principle shall henceforth be laid down and applied for regulating this matter, for assuring to the Bank on the one hand that the public balances shall not be allowed to fall below some proper and fixed limit, and for giving to the Government, on the other, a participation in the profits which may accrue from an accumulation beyond a certain amount.

The

* The following are extracts from the correspondence referred to:—

1. Letter from the Chancellor of the Exchequer to the Governor and Deputy Governor of the Bank, dated 26th April 1844.

“As bankers, the Bank will retain the management of the public debt, and the advantage of the public deposits, and the balances of the several public accounts at the Bank. It must, however, be distinctly understood that the Government retains an entire discretion as to the amount of such deposits to be left in the hands of the Bank, and as to a participation in the profits of such deposits, if they should from any circumstances be materially increased.”

2. Letter from the Governor and Deputy Governor of the Bank to the Chancellor of the Exchequer, dated 30th April 1844.

“In reference to the position of the Bank, as having the management of the public debt and the benefit of the Government deposits, we wish to state that the advantage from the former is diminished by the great risk of forgery, and from the latter by the alteration of the Exchequer accounts in 1834, which considerably reduced the amount of the public balances; but in reply to the proposed understanding that the Government will retain an entire discretion as to the amount of such deposits, and as to a participation in the profits arising from them, if they should, from any circumstances, be materially increased, we beg to say that we should not object to this, provided it is conceded by the Government that an allowance will be made to the Bank if the balances are reduced below their present amount.”

3. Letter from the Chancellor of the Exchequer to the Governor and Deputy Governor of the Bank, dated 2d May 1844.

“With respect to the public balances in the hands of the Bank, I deem it unnecessary to make any observation. The Government must necessarily retain an unfettered discretion as to the amount which it may be proper to keep in the Bank; and in the event of any extraordinary accumulation beyond the usual amount, it would be hereafter, as it has been heretofore, competent to them to make any arrangement with the Bank which might appear to them conducive to the public interests.”

(See Parliamentary Paper, No. 246, of the Session 1844).

The average weekly balances of public deposits, including the dividend and savings' banks accounts, according to the weekly notices published in the Gazette, which have remained in the hands of the Bank during each of the last 10 years, have been as follows:—

* The last three years include the balance of the Council of India, which in the prior years was considered to belong to the class of private deposits.

But these balances do not represent the full amount of public deposits, as we shall presently explain.

It is proper, however, that we should not omit to state that the Bank of England, in its transactions with its customers, does not act on the principle of allowing interest on deposits. We shall have occasion to revert to this subject in a subsequent part of this Report, when we submit our remarks on the subject of "Deficiency Bills."

We have annexed to this Report a list of the accounts which have hitherto been comprised under the head of Public Deposits in the Bank returns. It is evident from this list that the Bank cannot authoritatively determine, when accounts are opened in their books, in the names of individuals, whether they belong to the class of public or to that of private deposits; it is indeed impossible for the Bank to make a correct classification of such accounts in the absence of proper official designations, by which their public character can be distinguished. There are also several accounts of magnitude, consisting of moneys held in trust by public functionaries, under regulations laid down by Parliament, such as the Chancery and Bankruptcy accounts, which the Bank excludes from the list of public accounts. Although the moneys which they represent are no doubt, to a great extent, the property of private individuals, the accounts at the credit of which they remain would really appear to be public accounts, properly so called, although not so considered in the Bank returns. The Chancery accounts were indeed formerly included by the Bank under the head of public deposits, and they will be found so returned to the Select Committee on Public Expenditure, in 1807. (See Appendix, No. 3, to Second Report.) The Bank has ceased to treat them as such since the year 1844.

Appendix, No. 2.

We have also given a list of all the accounts before referred to, which, although consisting of public moneys, are, for the reasons above stated, not included under the head of "Public Deposits" in the Bank returns: this list clearly proves the necessity of determining by authority what accounts shall be considered "Public." It appears to us that any account which the Government regulates, or for which it is under any responsibility, is a "Public Account." The account of the late Registrar of the Admiralty Court, who became a defaulter in the year 1853 to a large amount, is a case in point; for although it was placed by the Bank, and properly enough, under the existing system, among the private deposits, the loss sustained by Mr. Swabey's defalcation fell nevertheless exclusively on the public.

Appendix, No. 3.

Independently of the immediate question which is referred to us, regarding the relations between the Government and the Bank, it is desirable for the objects for which the weekly statements of the assets and liabilities of the Bank are published, that the "public deposits" should be accurately distinguished from "other deposits."

Some of the public accounts at the Bank, such as the National Debt accounts, and those of the Inland Revenue Departments, are unnecessarily subdivided. In most cases this subdivision of balances is required by special Acts of Parliament. As no useful object is attained by it, it appears to us desirable that the Treasury should have authority to consolidate these separate cash accounts, so as to lessen the number and amount of balances in all cases in which it may appear to them expedient to do so.

The Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt have already made some progress towards reducing the number of their balances, by a consolidation of seven accounts into one; and this reduction may be carried still further if the restrictions referred to should be removed.

With respect to the Chancery account we have to point out that it stands, in respect to its management by the Bank, in no [degree whatever on the same footing as an ordinary account. By desire of the authorities of the Court of Chancery it is made to operate as a check upon the Accountant General in regard to the pecuniary transactions of his own office; for the Bank is required not only to keep the account of the receipts and payments out of moneys accruing from Chancery funds, in such manner as to show the sums carried to and paid from the account of the Accountant General, but also to open individual accounts for every party interested in every suit, and in every order of the Court, to whom any sum may be payable.

It appears to us that this forms no part of the ordinary duty of a banker, and it will readily be understood that the Bank is thus necessarily called upon to keep up a separate branch for the sole purpose of working this particular account, occasioning a special expenditure which would be unnecessary, if the Chancery account were dealt with like any ordinary public account.

2d. PAYMENT of the INTEREST of the PUBLIC DEBT.

In the payment of the interest of the funded debt, the Chief Cashier of the Bank of England, for whom the Governor and Company are responsible, discharges the functions of a Public Accountant; he is intrusted with certain advances under the authority of Parliament, renders an account of the application of the same to the Commissioners of Audit, and receives his quietus in the same manner as any other public accountant.

For the performance of these duties, the Bank receives from the Government a commission, calculated at certain rates per million, which commission for the year ended 5th April 1860, amounted to As the payment made to the Bank is intended to cover all expenses, risk, and profit, no question can arise, in considering this branch of its duties, as to a remunerating balance; the duty of the Government being simply to issue to the Bank the funds which are required for the payment of the public creditor.

The sum allowed by Parliament for the business of paying the annuities was originally in the nature of salary, to the cashier and to the accountant, "for receiving and paying money, and for their pains and charges for rendering accounts thereof." It was not till 1791 that a rate, per million, was recognized by Act of Parliament.

Besides the allowances granted for the duty of managing and paying the interest of the National Debt, the Bank receives payments which are principally of the nature of interest on its capital lent to Government, but which include a small allowance for management.

The first payment to the Bank of England, of this nature, was granted in 1694, when the Bank was incorporated, under the Act 5 & 6 William and Mary, c. 20.

Under that Act a sum of 1,200,000 l. was advanced by the Bank of England to the Government, and the payment of an annuity of 100,000 l. was provided for. The Act fixed the annuity at 100,000 l., and specified the rate of interest to be 8 per cent., but made no distinct reference to the appropriation of the 4,000 l., which was the surplus of the annuity beyond the amount of interest on the capital of 1,200,000 l. at 8 per cent. This sum of 4,000 l. a year is described in the Report of the Commissioners of Public Accounts in 1783, and in the Report of the Finance Committee of 1797, as an allowance "towards the expenses of the house."

By the Act 7 Anne, c. 7 (1708), and by the Act 15 Geo. 2, c. 13 (1742), the original capital was increased to 3,200,000 l., but without any increase of interest interest beyond the 96,000 l. paid under the Act 5 & 6 William and Mary, c. 20, so that the rate of interest was thereby reduced from 8 to 3 per cent.

The payment of 4,000 l. for house expenses has been continued as a distinct charge, under the head of management, from 1694 to the present time.

The allowance to the Bank or its officers for the management of the Public Debt as a distinct provision by Act of Parliament, commenced with the grant of annuities in the year 1714. In two Acts of that year (1 Geo. 1, c. 19 & 21) for receiving contributions to annuities, the Commissioners of the Treasury were empowered to allow "out of the sum granted for the payment of the annuities "to the cashier, two salaries or allowances;" the one (under the first Act) "not exceeding 250 l.;" the other (under the second Act) "not exceeding 100 l. a year, for receiving the money to pay the annuities, and applying the same "to that use, and for his pains and charges for rendering his account thereof; "and to the Accountant General, two salaries, the one not exceeding 200 l., the "other 100 l., for his service and charge in performing the duty and trust incumbent upon him by these Acts."

These salaries, converted into a rateable allowance per million, would stand as follows:—

YEAR.	ACTS.	CAPITAL.	SALARY.	RATE PER MILLION.
		£.	£.	£. s. d.
1714 - - - -	1 Geo. 1, c. 19 -	910,000	450	494 10 2
" - - - -	1 Geo. 1, c. 21 -	169,000	200	1,183 8 4

In 1726, annuities to the amount of 1,000,000 l. were created by the 12 Geo. 1, c. 2. In this case an allowance was granted by the Treasury, not to the Cashier and Accountant General, as in 1714, but to the Governor and Company of the Bank of England, for charges of management. The Act is silent as to any allowance, but the Treasury fixed it at 360 l. on a memorial from the Bank, by a warrant dated 20th December 1726.

In 1731 annuities, amounting to 800,000 l. were created, and the Act 4 Geo. 2, c. 9, gave a power to the Treasury to reward persons engaged in the execution of the Act. For the management of these annuities the Treasury allowed the Bank 360 l. a year, being at the rate of 450 l. per million.

The Treasury appear to have allowed the same sum as in 1726, but without reference to the amount of the capital.

In 1742, 800,000 l. annuities were granted by the Act 15 Geo. 2, c. 19, and by section 15 the Treasury were empowered to allow to the cashier, out of the Sinking Fund, a sum not exceeding 250 l. a year, and to the Accountant General a sum not exceeding 200 l. a year for the same services (i. e. receiving, paying, and accounting), as those described in the Acts of 1714 (1 Geo. 1, c. 19 & 21).

These allowances of 450 l. upon 800,000 l. produce a rateable allowance of 562 l. 10s. per million.

The rate of 562 l. 10s. per million continued until 1786. In that year the Commissioners of Audit represented to the Treasury that the allowance was excessive, and that the duty might, as they conceived, be performed in a separate office for a less sum than one-third of the existing allowance paid to the Bank, if it should not be thought proper that the business of paying the annuities should revert to the Exchequer, where it was formerly transacted.

In consequence of this representation the Treasury made an agreement with the Bank, by which the allowance was fixed at a uniform rate of 450 l. per million. Under this arrangement the annuities of 1726, which paid 360 l. per million, were increased to 450 l.; but the rate for all the rest of the debt was reduced to 450 l. per million. This rate continued from 1786 to 1808.

The Governor of the Bank stated in his evidence before the Committee of 1807, that there were no documents at the Bank to show the calculations upon which the rate of allowance was fixed in 1786 at 450*l.* per million.

In an Act passed in 1791 (31 Geo. 3, c. 33), a clause was inserted enacting that the allowance for managing the debt should continue at the rate of 450*l.* per million; but it is to be observed that no former Act contained any distinct stipulation for the payment of that rate of allowance.

By the Act (48 Geo. 3, c. 4) passed in 1808, the Bank became entitled to receive an annual payment, at the rate of 450*l.* per million, for any amount of debt amounting to three and not exceeding four hundred millions (400,000,000*l.*) of 340*l.* per million for an amount of four hundred millions, and not exceeding six hundred millions (600,000,000*l.*), and of 300*l.* per million for all above 600,000,000*l.*; and these are the rates still paid to the Bank.

We have already stated that the sum paid to the Bank in the last year for the management of the Public Debt, amounted to

The actual expense, according to the following account, for the year to 31 August 1860, was 126,445*l.*

The following are the items of this general charge:—

Salaries - - - - -	74,590
Pensions - - - - -	6,622
Directors' allowance - - - - -	2,402
Rent - - - - -	21,023
Repairs - - - - -	7,037
Rates, taxes, and tithes - - - - -	1,883
Stationery and other charges - - - - -	10,729
Forgeries - - - - -	2,159
	£. 126,445

We have to remark that the charge for forgeries in the above amount is smaller than the loss incurred on an average of former years. The net loss, in the year 1830 alone, which included Fauntleroy's frauds, was 214,000*l.* Owing to improved measures adopted for preventing and detecting fraud, the annual loss by frauds during the last 10 years is under 2,000*l.*; the average annual loss from the year 1808, including the cost of legal expenses, has been under 7,000*l.*

It would appear therefore that the public pays under the Acts relating to the Public Debt, a large sum in excess of the cost of performing the whole duty connected with the management of the debt.

The actual payment made to the Bank was lessened under the operation of the Act 7 & 8 Vict., c. 32. By the 7th section of that Act, the Bank is required, "in consideration of the privilege of exclusive banking, and the exemption from stamp duties," to deduct and allow to the public the sum of 180,000*l.* per annum from the charges of management. Under the operation of the 9th section of the Act, the additional sum of 8,078*l.* per annum is allowed by the Bank, on account of the profits of the increased circulation of notes on the credit of securities, raising the annual deduction from the charges of management to 188,078*l.* It is to be observed, however, that the first-mentioned sum of 180,000 includes 60,000*l.* as composition for stamp duty on notes; and the allowance of 8,078*l.* in respect of increased profits, the real diminution of the charge for management, provided by the said Act, is only 120,000*l.* per annum, which is the same amount as that fixed by the previous Bank Act of 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 98.

We are fully satisfied that the claim of the Bank to a liberal remuneration for the management of the Public Debt will be admitted, and that it will also be admitted that it is a great advantage that the Government is entirely freed from all risk or responsibility, not only in the payment of the dividends in detail to the vast body of stockholders, but also in respect to the management of the capital in its transfer from party to party, the whole of that risk and responsibility being undertaken by the Bank; yet it may nevertheless be a subject for fair consideration hereafter, whether some other and more simple arrangement arrangement might not be adopted, which, while it would fully secure the Bank, and give it that fair remuneration to which it is entitled for the management of so vast a charge, might not fairly produce some diminution in the public expenditure; and which would also put an end to the system under which the charge for management is one sum, while the payment to the Bank is another. We submit that it would be desirable that the full charge for management, whatever it may be, should be paid to the Bank, and that the deductions for composition for stamp duty on its notes and profits of circulation should be paid into the Exchequer, the former as part of the revenue derived from stamp duty.

Under the provisions of an Act passed in 1816 (56 Geo. 3, c. 97), an account is taken, within 30 days after the expiration of every quarter, of the lowest amount of the balance of the sums issued for the payment of dividends, terminable annuities, &c. due and not demanded, which may have remained in the hands of the Governor and Company of the Bank of England in the preceding quarter, and the excess above the sum of 100,000 l. is paid to the Exchequer as "Unclaimed Dividends." If, however, the balance at any period of the quarter should fall below 100,000 l., the Bank transmits a certificate to the Treasury, and thereupon an issue from the Exchequer is directed, upon the same day, to make up the balance to the sum of 100,000 l.; and this course is repeated from day to day, as often as the balance falls below that sum. The Act of Parliament provides that if the money shall not be issued, interest thereon at the rate of 5 l. per cent. shall be charged by and be paid to the Bank until the same shall be issued and paid; but the claim for interest has been obviated by making the requisite daily issues to raise the balance to 100,000 l.

The lowest balance upon which these receipts or issues take place occurs towards the close of every quarter, when the dividends have been nearly all paid.

The Bank has furnished us with an account relating to these payments and repayments, quarter by quarter, during a period of 10 years, which we have appended to this Report. From this account it appears, that while the Bank at the close of some quarters had a balance of more than 100,000 l., in others it had less; and that if the account had run on as an ordinary account during that period, a payment to the Bank of 56,000 l. at the termination of the account would have raised the balance to 100,000 l., and have rendered the numerous payments and repayments which took place unnecessary. It appears, therefore, to be advisable, especially as the present arrangement is attended with inconvenience, that it should be put an end to, and that the balance should be settled hereafter, from time to time, in such manner and under such regulations as shall appear to be reasonable and proper.

Appendix, No. 4.

DEFICIENCY BILLS.

Under an Act passed in 1817 (57 Geo. 3, c. 48) it is enacted, that "if upon making up the quarterly accounts of the Income and Charge of the Consolidated Fund, it shall appear to the Commissioners of the Treasury that the produce of the said fund is not sufficient to defray the charges thereon, then and in such case it shall and may be lawful for the Commissioners of the Treasury from time to time, by warrant under their hands, to cause or direct any number of Exchequer bills (deficiency) to be made out, at the receipt of the Exchequer, for such sum or sums of money as shall be sufficient to make up such deficiency."

By the 13th clause of the same Act, these Exchequer deficiency bills, and the interest which may become payable thereon, are charged upon the income of the Consolidated Fund for the succeeding quarter.

The practical interpretation of these provisions of the Deficiency Bill Act has been as follows:—

If a deficiency appears on making up the quarterly account of the income and charge of the Consolidated Fund; in other words, if the issues made out of the income income of the Consolidated Fund during the quarter for supply services, and the charge of the Consolidated Fund, or amount due, at the close of the quarter for the interest of the debt and other services chargeable on the Consolidated Fund, including the deficiency, if any, brought from the preceding quarter, exceed the income of the Consolidated Fund, the whole cash balance in the Exchequer at the close of the quarter is applied as far as it will go to meet the charges on the Consolidated Fund; and the Treasury is empowered to create Exchequer bills to the extent of the sum required in addition to the cash balance to provide for the entire charge of the quarter on the Consolidated Fund. These Exchequer bills are prepared and issued from time to time to the Bank of England, when money is required to provide for any of the services for which the cash balance at the close of the quarter was insufficient. The Bank places the amount in cash to the account of the Exchequer, and the Exchequer gives a credit on the Bank to the department by which the service previously unprovided for is paid. But while the deficiency bills continue in course of issue during the quarter, the accruing revenue is flowing into the Exchequer, and out of this accruing revenue the Exchequer bills are paid off; but as it is necessary, under the law, that these deficiency bills shall be issued, it frequently happens that they are issued to the Bank on the one hand, while a credit is granted at the same time out of the accruing revenue to pay them off on the other. When this is so, no charge for interest arises; but the system is complex, and we submit that it may be put on a more simple footing.

The issue of deficiency bills for the deficiency of the Consolidated Fund at a time when the growing produce of that fund is sufficient to provide for the payment of all services, without the aid of such deficiency bills, places the Government under the necessity of appearing to obtain advances from the Bank of England, which are not demanded by the requirements of the public service.

It is true that these advances are immediately repaid out of the growing produce of the Consolidated Fund, as we have already stated, and that no charge for interest is incurred, but the advance and the repayment are both operations which may advantageously be dispensed with. The deficiency bills actually issued should represent only the actual amount of accommodation which the Government receives from the Bank, and should not be swelled by merely nominal advances. We have therefore to suggest that the issue of deficiency bills should be regulated as follows:—

1st. That the income and charge of the Consolidated Fund shall be made up at the end of every quarter, as heretofore, and that the deficiency, whatever it may be, shall represent the amount to which the authority of the Government to borrow on deficiency bills shall be limited.

2d. That the Treasury shall be authorized to pay any of the services, charged on the Consolidated Fund of one quarter, out of the growing produce of the Consolidated Fund of the ensuing quarter, whenever it shall appear to them that such payment can properly be so made, without any issue of Exchequer bills; and that whatever sum shall be so paid shall be written off by the Exchequer, in diminution of the amount of deficiency bills, which might otherwise have been issued for the like purposes. It is our opinion not only that there is no objection to the course suggested, but that it will place the whole matter on a more simple and intelligible footing; and if no such arrangement shall be made between the Government and the Bank, for giving to the Government a participation in the profits of deposits on Public Accounts, beyond a certain amount, then we submit whether the interest to be paid to the Bank, on their advances on the credit of Deficiency Bills, might not be made to depend on the amount of Public Deposits in their hands during the period of such advances.

These recommendations are in harmony with those which are contained in the Report of the Select Committee on Public Moneys, dated the 18th August 1857.

3d. ISSUE DEPARTMENT.

The expenses of the Issue Department of the Bank of England, have been returned to us as follows :—

HEADS :	£.
Wages - - - - -	89,731
Pensions - - - - -	8,063
Rent - - - - -	25,600
Repairs - - - - -	8,568
Directors' allowance - - - - -	2,926
Rates and taxes - - - - -	2,300
Stationery - - - - -	1,811
General charges - - - - -	6,790
Bank-note paper - - - - -	11,623
Interest on cost of machinery - - - - -	1,500
Composition paid to bankers - - - - -	20,493
TOTALS - - £.	179,405

This statement shows a great increase of charge over the amount of the account presented to the Bank Committee in 1832 ; and the aggregate is largely in excess of the estimate submitted to the Chancellor of the Exchequer in 1844. The augmentation is chiefly explained by the composition paid to country bankers for issue under the Act 7 & 8 Vict. c. 32, and the increased charges for rent, and for the renewal of bank notes.

The profits of the Issue Department for the year have been returned to us as follows :

Interest on fixed securities - - - - -	£.	445,117
Gain on foreign coin and bullion - - - - -		10,811
	£.	455,928
Deduct expenses as above - - - - -		179,405
Profit - £.		276,523
Of this sum the public receives from the Bank:—
1st. Composition in lieu of stamps - - £.	60,000
2d. For share of profits of the circulation } department - - - - -	128,078
		188,078
Net profit - £.		88,445

The Statute under which the payment of 188,078*l.* is made by the Bank, (7 & 8 Vict. c. 32), directs, as we have before observed, that the said sum shall be deducted from the sums payable by law to the Bank, for the charge of management of the Public Debt; but, as by the said Act it is stated to be in consideration of the exclusive privileges of banking, and exemption from stamp duty (on its notes), we have thought it, in this statement, more appropriately shown in the form in which we have exhibited it.

In reference to the above account of the expense of the Issue Department, the Governor and Deputy Governor of the Bank have informed us that the renewal of Bank notes entails an annually increasing charge upon the Bank.

The following is a statement of the number of notes paid into the Bank yearly from the year 1841, with the average number per day in each year.

The increase between 1841 and 1859 is - - - 88 per cent.

The Governor and Deputy Governor of the Bank have stated to us that the safety and convenience which the process employed in the Issue Department places at the command of the noteholder, are universally acknowledged; but it appears evident that such advantages can only be preserved to the public at a large and increasing cost to the Bank, which it is difficult to estimate.

The results of the last 11 years show that the Bank in that period has paid to the public 56,000 l. of arrear dividends in excess of the unclaimed which have been paid into the Exchequer; and this amount has been consequently received from the Exchequer by the Bank.

Arrear dividends have a natural tendency to accumulate over a series of years; but for some years to come it may be anticipated that the claims for arrears will be in excess of the accumulations, because the Bank has recently adopted the course of giving notice to holders of stock, previous to passing the stock and dividends outstanding more than 10 years to the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt. Consequently, arrears for 9½ years' dividends, which, under the existing act, will have been paid periodically into the Exchequer, will be claimed to a much greater amount than formerly, and will have to be disbursed by the Exchequer, in reduction of the amount now advanced to Government out of unclaimed dividends. It would appear that 10 years must elapse before this disturbing cause attains to an equilibrium.

Stamps have been placed on every tract, letter, or separate document in 27 volumes of the Sloane collection, 11 Cottonian, 8 Old Royal, 27 Harleian, 59 Egerton, and 801 Additional Manuscripts, with 88 Books of Reference. The Charters stamped are, 696 Additional, and 11 Harleian Rolls. The total number of stamps affixed amounts to 70,338.

19. Thirty-five Cottonian, 29 Sloane, 68 Harleian, 58 Old Royal, 15 Lansdowne, 114 Egerton, and 505 Additional Manuscripts, have been bound, repaired, or lettered; 484 volumes have also been press-marked.

20. The Additional Charters and Rolls have been cleaned, repaired, and marked with numbers from No. 2,971 to No. 7,011, and from No. 15,013 to No. 15,242 inclusive, and boxes made for them. From No. 7,012 to No. 15,012, the boxes have been renewed or re-lettered, where required. Eleven Harleian Rolls have been repaired.

21. The whole of the Collections (estimated at 46,590 volumes, exclusive of the Charters and Rolls) have been twice dusted.

DEPARTMENT OF ANTIQUITIES.

I.—Arrangement.

PUBLIC GALLERIES.—The stone fixings and other fittings of the series of sculptures procured by Sir H. C. Rawlinson, K.C.B., from the palaces of Sennacherib and Sardanapalus III., on the site of Nineveh, have been completed, the subjects of the Bas-reliefs explained by descriptive titles, and the room in which they are arranged thrown open to the public, under the name of the Assyrian Basement Room.

In the passage adjoining that room some pavement slabs, excavated by A. H. Layard, Esq., M.P., in the ruins of the north-west palace at Nimroud, and covered with cuneiform inscriptions, have been mounted on slate, and arranged for exhibition.

A considerable portion of the series of slabs procured by Mr. Layard in the remains of the palace of Sennacherib, and bearing inscriptions which commemorate the invasion of Judæa by that monarch in the time of Hezekiah, has been repaired, cleaned, and mounted on slate.

In the small Assyrian Side Room wall cases have been fixed, for the display of a few inscribed bricks and other small antiquities from Assyria and Babylonia.

Several of the mosaic pavements excavated by the Rev. N. Davis, on the sites of ancient Carthage and Utica, have been repaired and mounted on slate, and their surfaces cleaned.

Adjoining the Carthaginian Basement Room, where these mosaics are exhibited, the interesting collection of sepulchral stelæ, with late Punic inscriptions, obtained by Mr. Davis in the neighbourhood of Tunis, has been temporarily arranged in a passage, in the absence of any more favourable space for its exhibition.

The arrangement of the Etruscan Sarcophagi, and cinerary urns on the west side of the Sepulchral Basement Room, and the fixing of the fac-similes of the wall paintings from the tombs in which those monuments were discovered, have been completed.

On the east side of the same room, the Collection of Roman Sarcophagi and other sepulchral monuments have been arranged; and one recess in the room has been fitted up as a Columbarium, in the walls of which have been placed cinerary urns, to illustrate the ancient Roman method of sepulture.

The supplemental Collection of Antiquities recently received from the Rev. N. Davis, and described under the head of Acquisitions, has been temporarily deposited in a room of the Western Basement.

A portion of the Basement, under the North Library, has been appropriated as a workshop for the repair and mounting of mosaics and sculptures, and another portion has been fitted up as a store room for the preservation of the type-casts, and moulds of coins and seals, and as a workshop for the manufacture of casts from the moulds, and the repairing and mounting of small antiquities.

The Store-casts from the Museum sculptures have been numbered and arranged, by the Formatore in the Basement under the Greek Rooms so as to facilitate reference from the originals.

The Lycian and Roman marbles have been cleaned under the direction of Mr. Westmacott.

The British and Mediæval Room has been ornamentally painted.

Eighty Egyptian objects have been catalogued.

228 Egyptian objects have been mounted; 53 larger Egyptian Antiquities have been placed on stone pedestals.

Two long Egyptian Papyri have been unrolled; one Papyrus has been cleaned, and another, being inscribed on both sides, has been placed between glass.

Two Bas-reliefs from Java have been mounted on stone plinths.

Forty-one objects have been repaired.

Sixty-nine pieces of Ivory from Nineveh have been mounted.

282 Gems have been mounted.

150 Bronze matrices of Seals have been mounted with their impressions, and arranged for exhibition.

1,639 Type-casts of ancient Seals have been mounted.

1,362 descriptive titles and numbers have been affixed to objects in the Collection.

Progress has been made in the registration of general Antiquities.

Seventy one new students have been admitted to draw in the Galleries.

MEDAL ROOM.—955 Coins have been registered.

1007 slips of the Catalogue of Greek Coins have been written.

The arrangement of the Greek series has been improved, and duplicates separated, but not removed from the cabinets.

The Roman Gold Coins have been systematically arranged, and their weights specified on the cards beneath them, from Augustus to Æmilianus (B.C. 27—A.D. 254), in completion of the temporary arrangement made in the year 1859.

The Catalogue of Roman Gold Coins has been continued, the whole number catalogued being 966, from Augustus to Maximianus Hercules.

The remaining portion of Mr. Hawkins' Medals (1,017 in number) has been registered.

The various Collections of English Medals, including that purchased from Mr. Hawkins, have been incorporated; the duplicates removed, and all the Medals, down to the reign of George III. inclusive, arranged in strict chronological order, forming a series of 3,796.

2,268 Mediæval and Modern Coins have been incorporated; and the arrangement of this portion of the Collection has been greatly improved.

II.—Acquisitions.

(A.) GENERAL ANTIQUITIES.—Two Collections of Antiquities received during the past year deserve special notice:

1. A further Collection of Antiquities, excavated by the Rev. Nathan Davis, at the expense of Her Majesty's Government, on the site of Ancient Carthage. This Collection comprises the following objects:—

Eighteen Votive Stelæ, of the Punic period, fifteen of which have on them Phœnician inscriptions, similar to those previously received.

A portion of a Phœnician inscription in 11 lines, similar in import to the famous Marseilles inscription, and containing regulations relating to offerings and payments to priests.

Eight Stelæ of Romano-Punic style, with rude figures and ornaments.

Ten Roman tablets of white marble, with inscriptions, chiefly Christian.

Portions of several mosaic pavements; among them three panels of good style and execution, containing representations of Marine Divinities and Harpies; seven other panels are from a quadrangular Pavement, representing Hunting Scenes, in which three mounted Huntsmen are pursuing gazelles, boars, stags and other animals, one of which is caught with a lasso. This Mosaic is interesting from its late date, being evidently subsequent to the time of Constantine, and probably not anterior to the fifth century.

2. A Collection of objects obtained from excavations, recently made by MM. Salzmann and Biliotti, on the site of the cemetery of the ancient town of Camirus, in Rhodes, under a firman obtained by Her Majesty's Government, which excavations have resulted in the discovery of some remarkable remains of the Archaic Greek period. The Collection has been selected from two consignments from this source, and contains many objects of Archaeological interest. They consist chiefly of gold ornaments, painted vases, vessels of glass and porcelain, bronzes, and terracottas, remarkable for their preservation and their Archaic character. Among the vases may be specially noticed a pinax, or plate, on which is represented the combat of Hector and Menelaus over the body of Euphorbus. The names of the combatants are inscribed over them in very ancient characters. Several of the vases are peculiar in style and fabric, and are, therefore, probably the produce of a local manufactory in ancient times.

Among the other acquisitions of Antiquities the following are the most important:—

I. Egyptian.—A Papyrus in the Hieratic character, containing an inventory of the furniture and dresses belonging to a temple.

Portion of a Sepulchral Tablet, with the name of a Queen Meri-sekar, hitherto unknown; presented by A. W. Franks, Esq.

II. Assyrian.

II. Assyrian.—A small quadrangular block of black marble, at one end of which are sculptured figures in bas-relief; the remainder of the block is covered with inscriptions in the cuneiform character, containing a portion of the annals of Sargon, King of Assyria. This valuable object was obtained in the East, many years ago, by Sir Henry C. Rawlinson, K. C. B., and was presented to the Museum by the late Earl of Aberdeen, K. G.

III. Phœnician.—An Onyx Scarabæus, with an inscription in Phœnician characters; brought from Egypt, and presented by Joseph Beldam, Esq.

IV. Greek.—A bronze Helmet of the Corinthian form, elegantly ornamented; presented by the Baron d'Everton, Her Majesty's Resident at Santa Maura, through D. E. Colnaghi, Esq., British Vice Consul at Missolonghi.

A painted Vase of the best period, in the form of an Astragalus. On it is represented a subject possibly from the story of Pentheus and the Bacchantes. This Vase, which was found in Ægina, is engraved in Stackelberg's "Die Gräber der Hellenen." Taf. xxiii. Presented by the late Earl of Aberdeen, K. G.

A bronze Tablet, found at Corfu, recording the conferring of the rights of proxenia on Pausanias, the son of Attalus, of Ambracia.

An inscribed Sepulchral Tablet, of late date, found in the Savoy; probably part of the Collection of Marbles formed by the Earl of Arundel.

V. Roman.—The front of a Sarcophagus, in white marble, on which are represented, in bas-relief, Apollo, Minerva, and the Muses; from the Collection of the Earl of Bessborough.

A fine specimen of Mosaic Glass, representing a tragic mask.

Fragments of Moulds, for making the fine Roman red ware, known as Samian; obtained on the site of the potters kilns in Auvergne; presented by Professor Mathieu and M. Compagnon, of Clermont-Ferrand.

Some silver Ornaments of the Lower Empire, obtained in various parts of Hungary.

VI. British.—An ornamental bronze Celt, found at Lakenheath, in Suffolk; presented by W. F. Newton, Esq.

A mass of molten bronze Spear heads, found in the Thames; presented by H. W. Diamond, Esq., M.D.

An Irish gold Ornament (ring money), peculiarly striated.

A remarkable iron Dagger of the Romano-British period, with a handle and sheath of bronze, found in the Thames at Cookham, Berks.

A very fine Saxon Brooch, inlaid with garnets, a Necklace composed of beads and Merovingian gold coins, and a bronze Bowl; all found in a grave at Sarre, in the Isle of Thanet.

VII. Mediæval.—A Quadrant, with the date A.D. 1399, and the badge of Richard II., King of England.

Six matrices of Seals.

A bronze Box of Oriental workmanship, inlaid with silver.

VIII. Ethnographical.—A Bas-relief, with numerous figures, and an inscription in the ancient Sanscrit employed by the Sâh Kings of Saurashtran, and of the date about the 6th or 7th century of our era.

A Chinese Idol representing a Goddess, with eight arms of gilt wood; presented by the Rev. H. Huleatt.

Two Axes of the Gaveoe Indians, Brazils, and a lip ornament of the Caraja Tribe; presented by the Hon. Robert Marsham.

(B.) COINS AND MEDALS.—The following table shows the number and classification of the acquisitions under this head:—

	Gold.	Silver.	Copper.	TOTAL.
Greek - - - -	1	57	147	205
Roman - - - -	19	38	147	204
Oriental - - - -	42	313	288	643
Mediæval and } Modern - - - -	40	153	140	333
TOTAL - - - -	102	561	722	1,385

In the Greek series the most remarkable acquisitions have been, a Tetradrachm of Abdera, believed to be unique, and three rare coins of Lycia.

In the Roman series, a rare Aureus of Trajan, from the Northwick Collection; a unique Medallion of Hadrian, in brass; a rare Sestertius of Antoninus Pius, and a very fine one of Faustina the elder.

In the Byzantine series, several copper coins of great rarity have been acquired.

In the Oriental series a valuable addition has been made to the Museum Cabinet, by the purchase of a selection from the very large Collection of Major Hay, late H. E. I. C. S.; among these the following specimens are deserving of especial notice:—

A fine Tetradrachm of Diodotus I., King of Bactriana, which is extremely rare; a Tetradrachm of Euthydemus, King of Bactriana; an almost unique copper coin of Nicias; two copper coins of Zoilus; an almost unique copper coin of Hippostratus; two square copper coins of Mauas; a long and remarkable series of the coins of Azes; 15 gold coin of Kanerkes; 12 gold coins of Indo-Scythic princes; a remarkable series, about 50 in number, of silver coins, struck in Khawarezm, by the descendants of Tímúr the Tátár; 20 coins of Mahmúd of Ghazna and of his descendants; and some finely preserved gold and silver coins of the Moghul rulers of Hindustan.

DEPARTMENTS OF NATURAL HISTORY.

ZOOLOGY.—The proportion of the stuffed specimens of the class Mammalia, exhibited in the glazed cases of the Southern Zoological Gallery and Mammalian Saloon, is in good condition. The stuffed specimens, which from their bulk, or from want of space in the cases, stand on the floor, have suffered in a certain degree from exposure to the corrosive smoke-dust of the metropolis, the effects of which cannot be wholly prevented.

The proportion of the Collection of Mammalia consisting of skins preserved in boxes, the Osteological specimens, including the horns and antlers, and the specimens kept in spirit, are all in a good state of preservation. The unstuffed, Osteological and bottled specimens are unexhibited and restricted in use, as at present located, to scientific investigation and comparison; but it is with difficulty that the special visitor for such purposes can now avail himself of these materials, owing to their crowded accumulation in the Basement-Rooms in which they are stored.

The exhibited Collection of Birds is in a good state of preservation, is conveniently arranged for public inspection, and is usefully and instructively named and labelled. The interest manifested by visitors, and the satisfaction generally expressed in regard to this gallery, indicate the amount of public instruction and gratification which would result from a corresponding serial arrangement and exposition of the other classes of the animal kingdom.

The stuffed and exhibited selections from the classes of Reptilia and Fishes, are in a very good state of preservation; they suffer less from the requisite processes of cleaning than the classes covered by hair, fur, or feathers.

Of these cold-blooded Vertebrates the proportion preserved in spirits is much greater than in Mammals and Birds; and, consequently, through the present allotment of space, the majority of the singular specific forms of Reptiles and Fishes are excluded from public view. Upwards of 2,000 specimens in spirits of these classes have been added in the past year to the previously crowded shelves of the basement store-rooms, where access to any individual specimen is a matter of some difficulty, if not hazard. Of the above additions, 1,456 have accrued from the donation of the Secretary of State for India in Council. The interest and novelty of the specimens have constrained their acceptance, and the same reason has led to the acquisition of many additions from other sources.

Amongst them deserve to be specified two specimens of that singular snake, the Herpeton tentaculatum, known for a century past only by a single discoloured example in the Paris Museum; those now in the stores of the British Museum were acquired from Siam, and have served to enrich Zoology with a complete knowledge of the species, through the descriptions and figures by Dr. Günther.

The following may be also specified, namely, the burrowing Snake from South Africa, Urochis microlepidotus; a new genus of tree-snake, Herpetoreus; a new genus, Barycephalus, of Saurian, from an altitude in the Himalayas of 15,000 feet above the level of the sea; also two new species of freshwater Tortoise, the Emys Livingstonii, dedicated to its discoverer in Africa, and the Emys Siamensis. Among the additions to the class of Fishes has been acquired a new genus, Hypsiptera, of the Scomberoid family; with several new species, including one, Centrolophus Britannicus, belonging to this country.

The specimens of the Molluscous classes showing the entire animal, preserved in spirits, and stored in the basement room, are in good condition. The entire class of Tunicata is so preserved; also the families or genera devoid of, or with rudimental, shells, in the other Molluscous classes. A small proportion of such "naked" Mollusca, and the soft parts of a few of the testaceous kinds, are represented by coloured wax models in the exhibited series of shells arranged in the Bird Gallery.

The whole of the exhibited collection is in an excellent state of preservation. The system or scale on which the genera, species, and local varieties of shells are exhibited, with their names and localities, gives to the ordinary visitor a power of comparing his own specimens, and, in most instances, of determining them, without the necessity of special application to the keeper or assistant in the department. The extent to which students and others avail themselves of this facility of comparison, and the value attached to it, show that the above principle and scale of exhibition of specimens are proper to be adopted in a National Museum for public use.

The

The proportion of the Crustacea, Arachnida, and Insecta, which is exhibited, and the much larger proportion which is stored in the basement rooms, are in a good state of preservation and arrangement.

The loss of colour by long exposure in the exhibited specimens, easily met in most instances by periodical replacements, is a contingency greatly overbalanced in favour of the public by the facility of comparison afforded to the diffident student, and by the pleasure and instruction imparted by easily seen and well-arranged series to the majority of visitors.

In most classes of Animals a proportion of the species, and in a few classes the whole, require to be preserved in spirits. Of the latter, the Annelides and Entozoa are examples; and these classes consequently remain at present unexhibited. The specimens are in good condition, and ready for systematic display whenever the requisite space may be acquired: in the number and variety of the species they are now calculated to convey a satisfactory and instructive idea of their respective classes. A catalogue of the Entozoa was printed by order of the Trustees in 1853.

Of the class Polyzoa, the majority of the specimens described in the printed Catalogue of 1852, together with the subsequent numerous additions, are preserved in spirits, and stored; all these are in good condition for future display and public use. The hard parts of certain of the species of this class, resembling Corals, are exhibited. The transitional character of the Polyzoa between Mollusca and Radiata makes the class one of peculiar interest.

Of the true radiated animals, the Shells of the Echinoderms (Urchins and Starfishes), and the Corals, with other calcareous parts of the Zoophytes, are exhibited as far as the extent of space for that purpose admits.

The specimens of Radiata having the soft or animal part, the order Holothuriadae, and the class Acalephae, are preserved in spirits and stored. The entire collection of Radiata is in a good state of preservation.

The number of additions to the Zoological Department during the past year is 25,222.

GEOLOGY.—The specimens of Geology and Palæontology are in a good state of preservation. A larger proportion of this Department is exhibited than of Zoology. The exhibited specimens are systematically arranged and labelled. With regard to certain groups of Fossils, the same plan and scale of arrangement are adopted as in the classes of Birds and Shells in the Zoological Department, and with the same advantage and satisfaction to the public. But this application of the Geological Collection is at present restricted to the Brachiopoda of the Tertiary and Cretaceous formations, to the Echinoids of the class Echinodermata, and to the Ammonites and some cognate families of chambered Shells, save where the specimens are too large for the cabinets. Of other groups of Invertebrate Fossils, selections have been made according to the extent of exhibition space at command. The specimens of Fossil Fishes, most of those of the class Reptilia, and a large proportion of the Mammalian Fossils, are exhibited in systematic arrangement. But these classes are but partially illustrated, in proportion to the known extinct forms, by the specimens already acquired.

The arranged series of Crinoidea, the larger examples of the Fossil Cephalopoda, and some other specimens, are stored in the Cabinets of the Gallery temporarily fitted up for the offices of the Keeper of Mineralogy and the Assistants in the Department of Geology. The Crinoids are now concealed by the Cabinets of the Allan-Greg Collection of Minerals, for the temporary location of which no other space is available in the Department, and only special visitors have access to the proportion of the Geological Collection available for examination, and preserved in this gallery of temporary offices. Numerous instructive Fossils continue to be stored, for want of exhibition space, in drawers and boxes.

The additions made to the Department of Geology during the past year, including the "Sowerby Collection," of Fossil Conchology, and the selections from the "John Brown" Museum, amount to upwards of 10,000 specimens, and there is no prospect of a decreasing ratio of increment in future years. The Collection, which includes the original specimens first described and figured in James Sowerby's "Mineral Conchology of Great Britain," bears to that important branch of Palæontology the same relation which the Cuvierian Collection of Mammalian Fossils in the Jardin des Plantes, Paris, holds with reference to that higher grade of life, and to the principles of the reconstruction of extinct species. Both are classical series of specimens of enduring and fundamental importance to the progress of Geological Science.

MINERALOGY.—The extensive and of late rapidly augmented series of Mineral specimens are in a good condition; a very large proportion is displayed, but extensive modifications and improvements in their systematic arrangement are in progress. The chief aim in a public Museum, viz., to show the best representatives of the species and chief varieties it may possess, has always governed the exhibition and disposition of the specimens in this beautiful class of natural objects.

Those which are preserved in drawers are so stored, save in the case of unequivocal and inferior duplicates, only until the requisite exhibition space may be acquired.

The additions made to the series of Mineralogy, during the past year, are upwards of 10,000 in number, of which 9,000 were acquired by a single purchase, viz., that of the highly reputed "Allan-Greg" Collection. Perhaps the most interesting of the additions to the Mineralogy, from other sources, are the Meteorites presented by Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India in Council. Of these, a mass weighing 25 lbs. is one of the very few collected examples of mineral bodies from extra-tellurial space which have been seen to fall.

The occurrence took place in the year 1815, about 80 miles from Ludhiana, in the East Indies. With the exception of the point of the smaller end which is broken off, the whole surface of this Meteorite is coated with crust; the effect, and indication of the nature, of the forces to which it had been subject in its passage to the earth. Another of these valuable donations is a portion of a Meteorite known as the "Shalka sky-stone," of which another portion was sent to Vienna for analysis by the Mineralogists of that capital.

The total number of additions made to the Departments of Zoology, Geology and Mineralogy, during the past year, is above 45,250. Some of the more remarkable among them are specified in this Report, or in the following Reports of the Keepers of the respective Departments.

The grounds on which have been based the several recommendations of the Superintendent and Keepers, to acquire these additions, either by purchase or by donation, and which have received the sanction of the Trustees, will be, in all probability, equally urgent and influential in regard to future opportunities of acquisition.

Present knowledge of the manifold works of nature, and present opportunities of acquiring the rarer examples thereof, do not support the expectation that the need of increased space for their public exhibition will become less in a few years; the vast proportion of the unknown to be known in nature, and the diversity and extent of the unexplored parts of the world, rather impress the belief that future additions will accrue to the Natural History Departments in an equal or increasing ratio for some years to come.

Richard Owen,
Superintendent of the Natural History Departments.

ZOOLOGICAL DEPARTMENT.

The Collections of the preserved Skins of Vertebrated Animals, and of the hard external Skeletons and Shells of Invertebrated Animals, exhibited in the public rooms, have been cleaned, and many orders and families have been re-arranged, to insert the specimens recently received, and to keep the exhibited part of the Collection on a level with the recent discoveries in Zoological science.

The Collection of Skins of Mammalia, Birds, Fish, and Reptiles, which are kept unstuffed for study, as they are in this state more useful for scientific examination and comparison by the zoologist; and the very extensive Collection of Skeletons of the Vertebrated Animals; and the collection of Specimens of Molluscs, Annulose, and Radiated Animals, preserved in spirits, in many thousand bottles, kept in rooms in the basement, and which are, like the Collection of Skins, available for the use of the scientific students, have all been cleaned, verified, and re-arranged, and have had their labels restored.

The general Collections of Annulose Animals, which are kept in cabinets in the Entomological room, under the Print room, and are accessible to the Students and more advanced Entomologists, have had very extensive additions made to them, which have been arranged in their proper places in the several parts of the Collection. Many portions, on which British and other European Entomologists have published works, have been re-arranged to make the Collection conformable to the present state and progress of the science, while other portions have been arranged in new cabinets, to remedy the crowded state of the drawers, caused by the recent additions.

During the year ending 1860, 25,222 specimens of different classes of Animals have been added to the several parts of the Zoological Collection; namely:—

Vertebrated Animals - - - - -	5,654
Molluscs and Radiated Animals - - - - -	4,251
Annulose Animals - - - - -	15,317
TOTAL - - - - -	25,222

A considerable portion of these specimens consist of the types of species described in various scientific works and periodicals, not including the very large number of specimens which have been described during the year, by the officers of the establishment, in the Catalogues published by the Trustees, and in various Transactions and Periodicals of Scientific Societies. The specimens, so described, are thus rendered of typical importance.

The 25,222 specimens added to the Collection, have been each regularly marked and described in the Manuscript Registers of Accessions, with an account of the locality from whence they were derived, and of the manner in which they were acquired, which adds greatly to their value, as giving the history of each. They have all been arranged in their systematic places either in the Collections open to the public, or in those portions of the general collection which are set apart for specific study, and all have been properly labelled so as to give their special history.

The following Catalogues have been published during the year 1860 :—

1. Catalogue of the Birds of the Tropical Islands of the Pacific Ocean, by G. R. Gray, F.L.S., F.Z.S.
2. Catalogue of Acanthopterygian Fishes, Vol. 2, by Dr. Günther.
3. Catalogue of Haliictidæ, Part I., by the Rev. Hamlet Clark, F.L.S.
4. Catalogue of Lepidoptera Heterocera; parts 20, 21; by Francis Walker, Esq.
5. List of the British Diatomacea, by Dr. W. Smith.

The labels on the stands of the Birds and other Animals recently added to the Collections, have been proceeded with, as fast as the painter could execute them. More than 53,000 letters have been painted during the past year.

In addition to the very numerous specimens of Fish, Reptiles, Mollusca, Insects, Crustacea, and other smaller animals, that are prepared in the Museum, there have been set up or re-set by the animal preserver :—

Mammalia, stuffed	-	-	-	64	-	skeletons	-	-	-	34
						skulls	-	-	-	15
Birds	-	"	-	-	17	-	skeletons	-	-	33
Reptiles	-	"	-	-	4	-	"	-	-	3
Fish	-	"	-	-	15	-	"	-	-	50 and 455 Animals have been mounted on stands.

Besides the Collections which have been purchased, because they were described types of species detailed in works or papers, or because they illustrated the zoology of particular regions, specimens have been selected from large collections offered for sale, from different countries, as those which were most required to complete the series, and as tending to illustrate the scientific classification, or as most useful in showing the habits and economical uses of the animals; or, again, as being subjects most interesting to the scientific student, from their tending to settle certain questions on the origin of species which are agitating the scientific mind at the present time.

The following additions may be specially mentioned :—

The Skeleton of an adult female Whale and also part of the Skeleton of a young female of the same kind (Hyperoodon rostratum) from Sandwich.

The typical specimens of Mammalia, Birds, Reptiles, Fishes, and Insects, from India, and of Insects from Java, described by Raffles, Horsfield, Sykes, Macleay, MacClelland, Cantor, and others; presented by the Secretary of State for India in Council.

John Edward Gray.

DEPARTMENT OF GEOLOGY.

The additions to the Geological Department during the past year consist of two extensive Collections, and many smaller series of Specimens, of which the principal objects are hereafter noticed.

The most important of the acquisitions is the Sowerby Collection, which is estimated to contain about 5,000 specimens. Its chief value arises from its comprising the greater portion of the objects figured and described in the well-known standard work of the Messrs. J. and J. De C. Sowerby, "The Mineral Conchology of Great Britain," a work, the publication of which occupied its authors upwards of thirty years, and which contains figures and descriptions of about 1,100 species of Fossil Shells from the various British Geological Formations. That the actual type specimens of this work may, for the future, be readily consulted at all times, through their being deposited in the National Collection, is a fact of the highest importance to the Palæontologist.

The second of the two great Collections above referred to, is that of the late Mr. John Brown of Stanway. It is estimated to contain about 8,000 Specimens. This Collection was bequeathed to Professor Owen, who immediately transferred it to the Museum, with the view that a selection might be made of all such objects as were found to be desiderata to the Geological Department. The selection is not yet completed, but the National Collection has already been enriched by a large number of very interesting objects through this valuable donation.

Next in importance among the additions made during the past year, is the extensive series of Mammalian and Reptilian remains, from various parts of India (but chiefly from the Sewalik Hills), presented by Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India in Council. The Collection in the British Museum already included a large portion of the remarkable Fossil remains figured in the beautiful work published by Dr. Falconer and Colonel Sir Proby T. Cautley, K.C.B. (the Fauna antiqua Sivalensis), yet some very important and striking Specimens were wanting, or represented by casts only, in the National Collection, and through this donation the greater part of these desiderata has been supplied.

It is desirable to mention here that one of the species of Fossil Elephants (the Elephas namadicus) discovered in the same locality, and which is represented by a Skull of very remarkable configuration, was still wanting to the Museum, but has been recently obtained by purchase from the United Service Museum.

Among the remaining acquisitions, the following may be noticed:—

Upwards of 100 Specimens of Pterodactyle and other Saurian remains, chiefly from the Stonesfield Oolite, presented by the Earl of Enniskillen. An extensive series of Reptilian remains, including Pterodactyle bones, also from the Stonesfield Oolite, presented by Sir Philip de Malpas Grey Egerton, Bart., M.P.

By these joint donations, and through purchases of Specimens from other localities, and different Geological formations, the remarkable group of Flying Reptiles, associated under the name Pterodactylus, is now well represented for the first time in the Geological Gallery.

A Collection of Indian Fossils, formed by Captain Vicary, presented by Sir Roderick Impey Murchison, G.C. St. S., to whom the department is also indebted for the donation of a series of Plants from the Permian formation of Russia, and for remains of a species of Palæotherium from Montmartre.

Casts of three leg bones of Dinornis giganteus, var. maximus, Owen, together with a femur and metatarsal bone, from the middle island, New Zealand, presented by the Rev. Dr. Lillie. These remains indicate the largest sized bird hitherto discovered; the three leg bones, the casts of which are alluded to, measure in length (taken together) 5 feet 4 inches; and the other thigh bone and metatarsal, indicate an individual of the same species, of still larger size; the bones of the leg, taken together, must have measured more than six feet.

A portion of a skull of a large and very remarkable extinct carnivorous quadruped (Thylacoleo carnifex, Owen), from the lacustrine deposits, about 80 miles south-west of Melbourne, Australia; presented by William Adeney, Esq.

A series of Hippopotamus Remains, from a bone cave in Palermo; presented by Octavian Blewitt, Esq.

A small collection of Mammalian and Reptilian Remains, from a bone cave in the Mauritius; presented by Dr. Ayres.

The donations of Fossils belonging to the invertebrate classes, are very numerous. The more important are:—

A collection of 54 specimens of Gault Fossils from Vancouver's Island; presented by the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty.

One hundred and fourteen Shells from the Miocene formation of South America; presented by W. G. Lettsom, Esq.

A series of Fossil Shells from the raised beach of Teneriffe; presented by Sir Charles Lyell.

The

The following gentlemen have likewise been the donors of objects of considerable interest:—R. T. Tones, Esq.; E. Gibson, Esq.; Martin Simpson, Esq.; S. V. Ward, Esq.; Dr. Geinitz; W. Carruthers, Esq.; C. B. Rose, Esq.; Dr. Hooker; J. Mushen, Esq.; the Bishop of Prague; M. Schæri; and Dr. Oppel.

Beyond the general collection first alluded to in this Report, the purchases during the past year have consisted entirely of selections made from various larger and smaller collections. The following are most worthy of note:—

Fifteen specimens of Fossil Fishes from the cretaceous formation of Westphalia; a series of Fossil Fishes from the Devonian of Tynet Burn, Orkney, Scats Craig, and Ludlow; fifteen specimens of the same class, from the Freshwater Limestone near Ulm, Wurtemberg; a fine series of Ceratodus Teeth from Aust Cliff; and 21 Fossil Fishes from the Carboniferous Limestone of Bristol.

The chief additions to the Fossils of the invertebrate classes, procured by purchase are:—

From the Crag Formations of England	-	-	-	-	130 Specimens.
" London Clay	-	-	-	-	418 "
" Chalk	-	-	-	-	59 "
" Upper Greensand	-	-	-	-	47 "
" Gault	-	-	-	-	45 "
" Oolite	-	-	-	-	180 "
" Lias	-	-	-	-	15 "

Specimens illustrative of the Palæontology of all the older rocks have likewise been procured, as well as a considerable series of Fossil Plants, especially from the coal and Devonian formations.

Numerous Fossils from foreign countries have been added; the most important is a series of 250 species of Shells, Corals, &c., from the Upper Chalk of Lemberg.

A large number of the specimens contained in the various collections above enumerated have undergone examination. The specimens have been accurately determined, catalogued, and incorporated in the general collection exhibited in the Gallery; and a very large series of specimens of small size and obscure species (the determination of which would require much time and minute comparison) having come to hand, the work of the department has been, not only to select the objects from the various collections offered, but to sort the specimens acquired, into species, mount them on tablets, attach a number to each, and enter them in the Catalogue under more or less special titles. The number of specimens entered during the year is,—

Of Vertebrata	-	-	-	-	-	1,522 Specimens.
" Cephalopoda and Univalve and Bivalve Shells	-	-	-	-	-	918 "
" Radiata	-	-	-	-	-	306 "
" Annelida	-	-	-	-	-	102 "
" Crustacea	-	-	-	-	-	208 "
" Insects	-	-	-	-	-	106 "
" Plants	-	-	-	-	-	896 "
Total						4,058

The incorporation of newly-acquired Specimens into the general Collection has necessitated the entire re-arrangement of certain divisions of the Collection: thus, the two wall-cases in Room IV. of the Gallery have been re-arranged with a large accession of specimens not hitherto exhibited; one of these is devoted to the remains of the various species of Stags, and the other to those of the Ox tribe.

The general Collection of Crustaceans has been under arrangement, and is in a forward state, but as there is not space for the whole of this group in the part of the Gallery to which the public is admitted, a case of selected Specimens only has been exhibited. The following objects have also been arranged, and displayed in the public room, during the year:—

A table-case of Insect remains.

Ditto of Crocodilian remains.

Ditto containing a selected series of Reptilian remains, chiefly to show the various modifications in the dentition of these animals.

Ditto of Rodent Quadrupeds.

Ditto of small Carnivora.

Ditto of Bird remains; chiefly from the Miocene formation of Central France.

The arrangement of the Fossil Plants has been completed.

Geo. R. Waterhouse.

DEPARTMENT OF MINERALOGY.

The past year has been one of considerable progress in the department of Mineralogy.

The now splendid and in some respects unrivalled Collection of Minerals has been enriched by additions of great importance, conspicuous among which is the Collection of Mr. Greg. The re-arrangement of the whole exhibited Collection has been actively proceeded with. This re-arrangement, however, is a work of great magnitude, involving, in fact, a recasting of the entire Collection. For, the important additions of the last few years, including those of 1860, have necessitated a redistribution of the space occupied by the several divisions of the series, and have at the same time rendered it advisable to withdraw from the cases into reserve drawers many specimens, whose places could be filled with others of higher interest to the mineralogist, and of greater attractiveness for the general public.

With this redistribution of the space has been associated the arrangement of the Collection, in conformity with a classification founded on the chemical and crystallographical characteristics of Minerals, as elaborated in the work of Dr. Gustav Rose, of Berlin.

Arrangements for a complete and conspicuous method of generic labelling throughout the Collection are in progress, and will be introduced pari passu with the advance of the re-arrangement in its several divisions.

The additions made to the Collection during the past year, without reference to the purchase from Mr. Greg, amount to 988 entries in the catalogue, representing considerably above 1,000 specimens, and among these, the following may be specified as a few of the most important:—

Three Meteorites, presented by the Secretary of State for India in Council; one a mass of stone, 25 lbs. weight, from Durala, Ludhiana, seen to fall on the 18th of February 1815.

A portion of the Shalka Meteorite.

And a mass, of which the locality of the fall is at present uncertain.

A valuable series of Tuscan Minerals, presented by the Cavaliere Sloane, of Florence, including fine masses of Copper Ore from that gentleman's mines; among these are some interesting Minerals of the zeolitic class, peculiar to that district, such as Sloanite, Picrinalcime, and Caporcianite; also specimens of Savite and Lardarellite, &c.

A splendid series of Apophyllite, Stilbite, Heulandite, and other zeolites in crystals, and in grouped masses of these, on a colossal scale, from the railway cuttings and tunnels in the course of construction through the Ghauts near Bombay; collected and presented by James Berkeley, Esq., Chief Engineer on the Great Indian Peninsular Railway.

A polished slab of finely tinted Labradorite; presented by P. Dudgeon, Esq.

Among the more valuable acquisitions by purchase, may be instanced,—

A very fine crystal of Emerald, Siberia.

A beautiful group of Rubellites from Elba.

Russian Phenakite.

Æschynite, doubly terminated.

Eukolite (Brevig).

Cronstedtite Przibram.

A large specimen of Nacrite.

Specimens of Chlorastrolite.

A mass, probably unique, of fine blue Kyanite, in crystals of great perfection.

Prehnite, from Tyrol.

Very finely crystallised Chabasite, from Kilmalcolm.

Cobalt manganise spar.

Carbonate of Silver (?), (Black Forest).

Calcite, a mass of "doubly refracting Spar," exhibiting an internal conchoidal fracture; Iceland.

„ Also splendidly grouped Crystals, partly in large twins, partly in slender acutely terminated prisms; Cornwall.

„ And also a Crystal of large dimensions; Derbyshire.

Lazulites, a series of deep blue Crystals, from Saltzburg, obtained by exchange from Mr. Mayerhofen, of that district.

„ Also a very fine series of the Crystals from the Georgian locality, United States; purchased of Professor Shepard.

Johannite, in fine little crystals.

Akanthite, from Freiburg.

Hauerite, a fine specimen with hemihedral modifications.

Bismuthite, Cornwall.

Stephanite, Freiburg.

Pyrrhotine, in large and resplendent Crystals, Brazil.

Chloride of Silver, Cornwall, crystallised.

„ And also Bromite and Embolite, Chili.

Fluors of great beauty, Cumberland.

Rutiles of great size and most remarkable crystalline forms, from Georgia; purchased of Professor Shepard.

Brucite in very perfect Crystals (Lancaster Co.).

Native Silver and Copper in crystalline dendritic and other forms, Lake Superior.

Native Antimony and Arsenic from Borneo. These are associated with Antimonite and with Pseudomorphous oxide (after the form of the latter), and also with remarkable crystals of Valentinite (?).

Of Meteorites, one from Aussen, Haute Garonne, has been procured, new to the Collection, and seven other new falls from America have been obtained by purchase from Professor Shepard.

But the most valuable addition which the Mineral Department has received for a very long time has been effected during the past year in the large Collection, to which allusion has already been made in this Report. This well-known Collection was formerly made at great expense by Mr. Allan, of Edinburgh. It was subsequently purchased by R. T. Greg, Esq., of Norcliffe Hall, near Manchester, and has since been added to largely, and with great discrimination, by his son, R. P. Greg, Esq.

The Collection numbers above 9,000 specimens. It is very rich in British minerals, and in this respect alone forms an important acquisition to the National Collection. But it has also more than justified the grounds on which it was purchased, by the many specimens which its drawers have contributed to fill up deficiencies that previously existed in the Museum. Thus, while several mineral species were represented in the Allan-Greg Collection by series of specimens that might vie for perfection with those in any Collection in the world, it was especially rich in the variety of the localities which it represented, as well as in the still more important point of diversity of species. Already, into only 18 table cases, which have been under arrangement since the incorporation of this Collection with that of the Museum, has been commenced, and into five others in which the arrangement is still incomplete, no less than 1,130 specimens have been introduced from the drawers of Mr. Greg's Collection, among which 31 new species, represented by 55 specimens, are found that were previously unrepresented in the Museum. Moreover, many old and fine specimens, the localities of which have not been placed on record in the Catalogues of the Museum, are matched by small specimens in the Allan-Greg Collection, from which they are enabled to borrow, in some cases with certainty, and in others with great probability, the requisite evidence of the country, and often of the precise locality of their origin. In the very interesting appanage to the Mineral Collection formed by the group of Meteorites, the Museum is largely indebted to this new acquisition. The several falls of Meteorites of which specimens existed in the Museum in January 1860, numbered 78, namely, 36 Meteorites possessing the character of stones, and 42, consisting of (Nickeliferous) iron, more or less free from stony admixture. The Meteorites, new to the Museum, of which specimens exist in the Allan-Greg Collection, amount to no less than 31 in number. It may be further remarked on this subject, that the acquisitions of the past year, including these 31 new Meteorites, together with the valuable donation from Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India in Council, and the other eight Meteorites, to which allusion has been made, raise the total number of distinct Meteoric falls from space, represented by specimens in the National Collection, from the 78 in January 1860 to 122 in January 1861. The finest Meteoric Collection in the world, that of Vienna, consisted in 1859 of 139 different Meteorites.

As regards the general state of the Collection, its condition is thoroughly good.

Nevil Story Maskelyne.

DEPARTMENT OF BOTANY.

The various collections and specimens received during the past year have been examined and partially arranged. A large portion of Dr. Horsfield's great Javanese Herbarium, a considerable part of the Herbarium of the late Professor Nuttall, a collection of plants made in Mogador by the Rev. R. T. Lowe, a continuation of Mr. Thwaites's Ceylon Collection, and also of Mr. Spruce's Brazilian Plants, together with several minor Collections, have been named, arranged, and laid into the General Herbarium; and the whole of the Herbarium and Exhibition cases have been examined and re-camphored.

The original drawings made by Mr. James Sowerby for "English Botany," have also been carefully compared with the published work, and put into complete order, and many of the volumes of the Sloanean Herbarium, which have special reference to British Plants, have been thoroughly examined and rendered more easy of consultation; in the performance of which operations much valuable assistance has been afforded by the Rev. W. W. Newbold.

The following are the principal additions made to the Department, by purchase or donation:—

100 Species of British Lichens, forming the first century of Mr. Salway's "Lichenes Exsiccati."

50 species of European Rubi, forming the first fasciculus of Wirtgen's "Rubi Rhenani."

DEPARTMENT OF PRINTS AND DRAWINGS.

THE arrangement of the Illustrations to Books, and the Miscellaneous Engravings by Faithorne has been completed, and they have been inserted in a volume which forms the sixth and last of that Artist's works.

All the Engravings from designs by English artists from A. (Absalom) to P. (Powell) have been brought together for the purpose of being arranged in volumes.

Three thousand five hundred and ninety-one articles have been entered in the Register of purchases and presentations; each of them has been stamped with the register mark, which has also been affixed to 2,877 various prints and newspaper cuttings, which form illustrations to the volumes in which they are inserted.

The following are some of the more important acquisitions made in the course of the year:—

BRITISH MUSEUM (LIGHTING BY GAS).

RETURN to an Order of the Honourable The House of Commons, dated 12 June 1861;—for,

COPY “of any REPORTS made to the TRUSTEES of the BRITISH MUSEUM with reference to LIGHTING that Institution by GAS, and any RESOLUTION of the TRUSTEES in relation thereto.”

COPY of a LETTER from Mr. BRAIDWOOD, Superintendent of the London Fire Engine Establishment, to the Principal Librarian of the British Museum.

Sir,

68, Watling-street, 11 April 1861.

I BEG leave to acknowledge receipt of your letter of the 6th instant, and to submit the following answers to your questions as to lighting up the British Museum in the evenings.

1st. Are you of opinion that this (Lighting) could be safely done?

You do not state whether the proposed lighting is to be effected by candles, oil, or gas. Lighting might be effected with candles or oil with comparative safety (under good management), but if the building is to be lighted by gas the question assumes a very different aspect.

In the first place, the use of gas desiccates everything within its reach, especially all ceilings, roofs, &c., which are placed above the lights, thus rendering them much more inflammable than they otherwise would be, causing what would otherwise be a trifling fire, a serious conflagration. In the second place, the heat and fumes evolved by the combustion of gas are most decidedly against the preservation of any vegetable or animal substances, and tend to discolour stone, marble, &c., in such a manner that it is very difficult to restore the original colour. This is stated on the supposition that the Museum is to be lighted by single Argand lights; but if what are called “sun” burners are used the risk will be immensely increased. The sun burner consumes a very large quantity of gas at one point, causing an intense degree of heat, which has to be carried off by pipes, a process difficult of performance with perfect safety in a building constructed with so much inflammable material as the Museum. Several fires have been occasioned by their use. I would, therefore, consider these lights as totally inadmissible in the British Museum.

Independent of these risks is the danger of explosion to which every place where gas is used is liable, notwithstanding the accuracy with which the fittings may be executed; and it must not be forgotten that the more substantial the building is, so much more destructive is the explosion.

2d. Do you consider that it would render extensive Alterations in the Building necessary?

It does not appear to me that extensive alterations would be necessary for the introduction of gas; but the floors, ceilings, and walls would be very much cut about, and a very heavy expense incurred.

3d. Do you consider the Risk, supposing there is any, equal in all Departments?

I believe the risk to be such that on no consideration should a building intended to last for ages, and containing such invaluable property as the British Museum, be subjected to it.

The relative risk of the different departments will vary according to the structure and contents of each. Thus those parts which are most solidly constructed and of the heaviest materials will suffer most in case of an explosion, and those departments where there is a greater quantity of combustible materials in the structure and contents will, when such materials are sufficiently dried and prepared for burning, suffer more severely from any trifling accident which may take place, and which, but for such desiccation of the materials around, would have passed off without much damage or observation.

* I have always disliked the small hot-water pipes used to heat the British Museum; although they are very carefully placed in slate troughs, several trifling accidents have occurred from them. If such accidents were to occur after the surrounding timber had been dried up by gas for some years, the result might be much more serious.

I would also beg to add, that two firemen would be incapable of giving the necessary attention if the Museum were lighted by gas, and a considerable number of additional firemen must be employed.

I have, &c.
(signed) James Braidwood,
Superintendent of the London Fire Engine Establishment, and Associate of the Institution of Civil Engineers.

P.S.—As this is a matter of very great importance, I have shown this letter to Mr. Warrington, the Chief Chemical Officer at the Apothecaries' Hall (who is often consulted in such cases), and he agrees with me as to the destructive tendencies of the vapour evolved in the burning of gas, and is ready to give the chemical reasons if called upon.

A. Panizzi, Esq.,
Principal Librarian,
British Museum,

COPY of a LETTER from Sydney Smirke, Esq., R. A., Architect to the British Museum, to the Principal Librarian.

Dear Sir,

Grosvenor-street, 12 April 1861.

I RETURN herewith Mr. Braidwood's able report on the subject of lighting the British Museum at night.

I quite concur with Mr. Braidwood as to the great risk of using gas stoves, without removing every inflammable substance far away from them and from the ventilating tubes over them. It would be impossible to do this without a very extensive re-construction of the floors and roofs.

With regard to the escape of mischievous vapours, Mr. Braidwood does not allude to the contrivances, I believe successfully adopted in various buildings for preventing that escape; but those contrivances add very considerably to the cost, and require constant and careful attention.

With regard to the risk of leakages, it is impossible to deny that wherever gas is used there must be a greater or less chance of escape of gas, either from defective pipes, bad joints, the disturbance of the work by careless workmen, or from negligent management.

The above considerations lead me to concur with Mr. Braidwood in doubting the expediency of introducing gas into the interior of the Museum.

A. Panizzi, Esq.

I am, &c.

(No. 42—1860.)

COPY of BOARD'S MINUTE of 15th May 1860.

THE "Customs Tariff Amendment Act, 1860," having passed through Parliament, the Board have had under consideration the orders which it may be necessary to issue with the view of giving practical effect to several of the provisions of the Act, requiring the special attention of the officers of the department, and which will come into operation at the expiration of six days from the date of the passing of the Act.

By the 18th section, the Lords of the Treasury, or the Commissioners of Customs, may fix the number or quantity of goods which shall constitute the unit of entry, chargeable with the rate of 1*d.* under the 16th section; and a table of the units of entry having been prepared and submitted to the Lords of the Treasury for approval, the same will be issued to the proper officers in due course.

In the meantime the Board direct, under the authority of the 19th section, that the document on which the charge of 1*d.* for each package or unit of entry, is to be paid by adhesive stamps, shall be the entry inwards of the goods, except as provided for by the latter part of the 20th section.

A Custom stamp or stamps of the value required must be placed on each entry, and be presented, clear and unobliterated, to the proper officer in the Long Room authorised for the time being to receive entries of goods inwards.

It will be the duty of such officer, on approving and passing the entry, to obliterate the stamps.

The 16th section imposes a charge of 1*s.* 6*d.* upon every Customs bill of lading, on the exportation of any goods from Great Britain and Ireland. The provisions relating to the use of that document are set forth in sections from 21 to 30 inclusive.

The Customs bill of lading must be a copy or counterpart of the actual bill of lading in respect of the goods comprised therein.

It will be required for all goods, whether dutiable or free.

It must bear an adhesive stamp of 1*s.* 6*d.*, which stamp is to be obliterated by the searcher, upon the document being presented to him.

It must not contain goods of more than one exporter, or consignments to more than one consignee, under a penalty of 5*l.* and treble the amount of stamp duty evaded; that is, 4*s.* 6*d.* in respect of each consignment. It will be the entry outwards in respect of free goods, and must be accompanied by an accurate specification of the marks, numbers, description, quantity, and value of the goods, distinguishing British manufactures from foreign imported free, or on which duties have been paid and not drawn back.

It must be delivered to the proper officer within 24 hours after the final clearance of the ship, with or without the specification, which may, at the option of the shipper, be delivered within six days, under a penalty of 40*s.* for default in either case.

With respect to dutiable and drawback goods, the shipping bill, before shipment, will be required as heretofore, the stamped Customs bill of lading, though required to be delivered, not being the entry outwards for such goods.

The same regulations are to be observed as to the delivery of bills of lading and specifications in respect of goods transmitted to the port of exportation from any other port or place for shipment.

The master of the ship, or his agent, is required, within six days after final clearance of the ship, to deliver to the proper officer the manifest required by the 26th section, under a penalty of 20*l.*, unless he shall have delivered in the whole of the Customs bills of lading in respect of the goods exported in such ship within 24 hours after her final clearance, in which case the manifest may be dispensed with.

The 23d section authorises the Commissioners of Customs to appoint any officers, clerks, or other persons in the service to act as distributors of the stamps required under the Act. The Commissioners, therefore, appoint the collectors at the several ports, or such persons as may act for them, to be the official distributors of stamps for the purposes required.

A sufficient quantity of stamps for present purposes is forthwith to be supplied to the collectors at the several ports in Great Britain and Ireland, who are to cause public notice to be given that the same can be obtained, upon application to them at the Custom-house, or to the usual sub-distributors licensed by the Commissioners of Inland Revenue for the sale of stamps.

With respect to the rates payable upon the delivery of goods from the warehouse for home consumption under the 15th section, the Board direct that the mode of payment as to whether the amount due shall be calculated and made payable upon each separate entry, or upon the aggregate amount of several entries, be left to the option of the merchant, who may take the course most convenient to himself, the collectors observing that as regards the fractions of a penny, the same principle is to obtain as at present in computing duties, viz., that of charging $\frac{1}{2}$ d. and upwards as 1 d., and throwing off all fractions under the $\frac{1}{2}$ d.

It will be also necessary to bring to account, by a separate entry each day, the total amount of charges received under the section in question as monies, not duties. An amended form of abstract of duties will be supplied in the usual manner.

The collectors will further observe, that the difference between the higher and lower rates, under the 15th section, is not to be charged on such goods as may be removed to ports or places which may enjoy the privilege of bonding foreign merchandise.

Custom House, London, 15 May 1860.

THE foregoing copy of the Board's Minute of this day's date is transmitted to the collector and controller at _____ who are to govern themselves in accordance therewith.

By Order of the Commissioners,

F. G. Gardner.

COPY of BOARD'S MINUTE of 16th May 1860 (applicable to London only).

THE "Customs Tariff Amendment Act, 1860," having passed through Parliament, the Board have had under consideration the orders which it may be necessary to issue with the view of giving practical effect to several of the provisions of the Act, requiring the special attention of the officers of the department, and which will come into operation at the expiration of six days from the date of the passing of the Act, viz., on the 22d instant.

By the 18th section, the Lords of the Treasury, or the Commissioners of Customs, may fix the number or quantity of goods which shall constitute the unit of entry, chargeable with the rate of 1 d. under the 16th section; and a Table of the units of entry having been prepared and submitted to the Lords of the Treasury for approval, the same will be issued to the proper officers in due course.

In the meantime the Board direct, under the authority of the 19th section, that the document on which the charge of 1 d. for each package or unit of entry is to be paid by adhesive stamps, shall be the entry inwards of the goods, except as provided for by the latter part of the 20th section.

A Customs stamp or stamps of the value required must be placed on each entry, and be presented clear and unobliterated to the proper officer in the Long Room authorised for the time being to receive entries of goods inwards.

It will be the duty of such officer on approving and passing the entry to obliterate the stamps.

The 16th section imposes a charge of 1 s. 6 d. upon every Customs bill of lading on the exportation of any goods from Great Britain and Ireland; the provisions relating to the use of that document are set forth in sections from 21 to 30 inclusive.

But

But as respects the Port of London, the Board, by virtue of the power vested in them by the 21st section, order and direct that the shipping bill now required by law, shall be used and accepted as and for the bill of lading therein referred to.

The shipping bill must be delivered to the searcher or other proper officer prior to the shipment of all goods, whether dutiable or free, under a penalty of 40 s.

It must bear the stamp of 1 s. 6 d., clear and unobliterated, and which stamp is to be obliterated by the searcher upon the document being presented to him.

It must contain the particulars with respect to free goods, as the specification required under the head of bill of lading, unless the shipper desires to postpone that specification for six days, in which case the shipping bill need not contain more than the marks and numbers of the packages and general denomination of the goods, with the name and address of the exporter, or his agent.

It must not contain the goods of more than one consignor, nor the consignments of more than one consignee, under a penalty of 5 l., and treble the stamp duty evaded, i. e., 4 s. 6 d. for every separate consignment beyond the first.

And the specification giving the marks, numbers, description, quantity, and value of the goods, distinguishing British manufactures from foreign imported free of duty, or on which the duties have been paid and not drawn back, must then be delivered within the six days, under a penalty of 40 s.

The master of the ship or his agent must, within six days after final clearance of the ship, deliver to the proper officer the manifest required by the 26th section of the Act, under a penalty of 20 l.

The 23d section authorises the Commissioners of Customs to appoint any officers, clerks, or other persons in the service to act as distributors of the stamps required under the Act. The Commissioners, therefore, appoint the collector or such persons as may act for him, to be the official distributors of stamps for the purposes required.

A sufficient quantity of stamps for present use is forthwith to be supplied to the collector, who is to cause public notice to be given that the same can be obtained upon application to him at the Custom House, or to the usual sub-distributors licensed by the Commissioners of Inland Revenue for the sale of stamps.

With respect to the rates payable upon the delivery of goods from the warehouse for home consumption under the 15th section, the Board direct that the mode of payment as to whether the amount due shall be calculated and made payable upon each separate entry, or upon the aggregate amount of several entries, be left to the option of the merchant, who may take the course most convenient to himself, the collector observing that as regards the fractions of a penny, the same principle is to obtain as at present in computing duties, viz., that of charging $\frac{1}{2}$ d. and upwards as a penny, and throwing off all fractions under the $\frac{1}{2}$ d.

It will also be necessary to bring to account by a separate entry each day the total amount of charges received under the section in question as "Moneys not duties."

The collector will further observe that the difference between the higher and lower rates under the 15th section, is not to be charged on such goods as may be removed to ports or places which now enjoy the privilege of bonding foreign merchandise.

Copy of Commissioners' Minute.

(No. 44—1860.)

Gentlemen,

Custom House, London, 16 May 1860.

WITH reference to the Board's General Order, 42—1860, I am desired to transmit to you a copy of the warrant of the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury, dated this day, fixing the number or quantity of goods which shall constitute the unit of entry chargeable with the rate of 1*d.* under the 16th section of the "Customs Tariff Amendment Act, 1860;" and I am to direct you to cause the same to be made known, for the information of the merchants at your port, and to govern yourselves accordingly.

The Collector and Controller at -----

I am, &c.
(signed) F. G. Gardner.

After our hearty Commendations,—

WHEREAS, by "the 18th section of the Customs Tariff Amendment Act, 1860,"—

"It is enacted, that it shall be lawful for the Lords of the Treasury, or the Commissioners of Customs, to fix or adjust the number or quantity of goods which shall constitute the unit of entry chargeable with the rate of One penny, having regard to the value of the goods; and from time to time to alter and vary the same as they may see fit, so that the rate of One penny shall exceed as little as may be in their judgment Five shillings for every hundred pounds sterling upon the lowest ordinary value of the article to which such charge attaches."

Now We, the undersigned Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury, do hereby order and direct that the numbers and quantities of goods as stated in the following table shall constitute the units of entry so chargeable with the rate of 1*d.* each; and any portion, number, or quantity of goods less than the unit stated in respect of such goods shall also be deemed to constitute an unit of entry chargeable with the rate of 1*d.*, viz.:

COPY of BOARD'S MINUTE of 29 May 1860.

A QUESTION having arisen whether the rate of 1 d. payable under the 16th section of the Act 23 Vict. c. 22, according to the unit of entry, is chargeable on goods for which an entry has not hitherto been required,—

The Board are of opinion, that packages of baggage and personal effects, and also of diamonds, bullion, and other goods exempt from entry are not subject to the rate of 1 d. under the Act referred to, of which the proper officers in London, and the collectors and comptrollers at the outports are to be apprised for their government.

MINUTE, 1 June 1860.

THE Board advert to the 16th section of the Customs Tariff Amendment Act, 23 Vict. c. 22, by which it is provided that there shall be charged upon every Customs bill of lading on the exportation of any goods from Great Britain and Ireland the sum of 1s. 6*d.*, and to their Minute of the 16th ultimo, whereby in virtue of the power vested in them by the 21st section of the Act, the Board directed that the shipping bill required by law should be used and accepted as and for the bill of lading. The Board find that goods exported by one consignor to one consignee abroad, constituting one consignment within the meaning of the law, are in many instances cleared in separate portions from the various docks and stations, and thence forwarded for shipment to the station at which the exporting vessel may be lying; for which several parcels of goods, separate shipping bills have, under the export regulations, been hitherto required, the Board, with the view of relieving the exporters from the accumulated charges in strictness payable under the Act on such shipping bills, direct that the following regulations be observed; viz., that the shipping bill or entry of one consignor to one consignee be allowed to remain open for endorsement, during the loading of the ship, of such goods as are comprised in one consignment, and where goods to be exported from the bonding warehouses are at different docks or stations, that the stamped shipping bill bearing the entry of such goods do remain open in the office of the principal searcher; and that the documents upon which the controllers of accounts deliver the goods, be deemed supplementary shipping bills and be exempted from the charge of 1s. 6d.; such supplementary shipping bills are, however, to be impressed with the official stamp of the principal searcher as proof that the proper adhesive stamp has been affixed to the shipping bill.

The proper officers to be apprised.

MINUTE, 5 June 1860.

THE Board are of opinion that in cases where the full quantity of tea, sugar, wine, or any article liable to the unit rate by quantity shall not have been inserted in the original warehousing entry, that importers may be allowed, on ascertaining the correct quantity after landing, either to add the additional number of stamps to the original entry, which will be found at the office of the Controller of Accounts for the station at which the goods are deposited, or to pass another entry in the Long Room in the form of a post entry, affixing thereto the proper stamps, and referring to the original entry, but not to insert the mark, number, or description of the package, but merely the quantity on which the unit of entry is due.

And the Board direct that the proper officers do govern themselves accordingly.

THE Board, with the view of obviating the inconvenience which might result from delay in the delivery of goods short entered, and in respect of which the requisite number of stamps, according to the unit of entry, may not have been affixed to the Warrant, direct that no demand be made for a post entry in those cases in which the value of the stamps deficient may be under 6*d.*, except as respects goods in packages, in which case, as an entry is indispensable, the proper number of stamps is to be required.

MINUTE, 7 June 1860.

THE Board have adverted to that part of their Minute of the 16th ultimo, prescribing certain rules to be observed in carrying into effect the provisions of the "Customs Tariff Amendment Act, 1860," whereby, as respects the Port of London, the Board, by virtue of the power vested in them, directed that the shipping bill should be used as and for the bill of lading.

Under the regulations therein laid down, it is required that the shipping bill shall not contain the goods of more than one consignor, nor the consignments of more than one consignee. The Board are of opinion that it is expedient to relax the regulation in this respect, and they allow goods shipped by one consignor to various consignees to be included in one and the same shipping bill, subject to the condition that the regulations be in other respects strictly observed; and the proper officers are to take care that the requisite number of stamps, according to the respective consignments, be affixed to the shipping bills, of which the several officers concerned are to be apprised for their government.

COPY of a Minute of the Board of Customs of 19 June 1860.

THE Board have adverted to the existing practice in regard to the mode of returning duties paid in error, with the view to the adoption of regulations for facilitating the repayment of sums so overpaid, as well as upon rates and charges under the “ Customs Tariff Amendment Act, 1860,” particularly with reference to the 35th section, whereby provision is made for allowance of the equivalent of such adhesive stamps required under the Act as may have been unnecessarily used.

The Board are of opinion that it is not necessary that special application should be made to them for return of moneys erroneously paid as heretofore in those cases in which entries shall have been passed in respect of the goods, but that sums overpaid as Customs duties, or as rates or charges under the Act referred to, whether by money payments or by adhesive stamps, may be in future returned by means of the ordinary over-entry certificate ; and the proper officers at this port, and the collectors and comptrollers at the outports are to govern themselves accordingly ; and the examiner will take care that repayments of sums received on account of rates and charges under the “ Customs Tariff Amendment Act, 1860,” be kept distinct in the official records from repayments of the ordinary Customs duties.

THE Board are of opinion that empty packages, as to which there may be no doubt that they have been exported with goods from this country and returned, samples or patterns of goods of no value except as such,—and returned British goods admissible by bill of store,—are exempt from the import rate of 1 d., chargeable, according to the unit of entry, under the Customs Duties Consolidation Act, 1860; and the Board direct the proper officers to govern themselves accordingly. And they will observe that hoops of wood, for which, under the General Order, No. 51—1860, the unit of entry was fixed at 1,000, being now made subject to Customs duty as wood goods, are, in common with other wood goods, also exempt from the unit of entry charge. Copy of a Minute of the Board of Customs, dated 4 January 1861.

THE Board have adverted to the provisions of the 5th section of the Customs Duties Consolidation Act, 1860, by which it is enacted, "that if the rates of One penny per unit of entry made payable under section 19 of the Customs Tariff Amendment Act, 1860, by stamps shall amount to more than Ten shillings upon any entry or entries, or document or documents, to which the Commissioners of Customs are authorised to direct the same to be affixed, the same may, at the option of the persons liable thereto, with the sanction of the said Commissioners, and under such regulations as they may see fit, be paid in cash."

The Board are of opinion that in cases where the importer, or other person concerned, may be desirous of paying the amount in cash, the following regulations should be observed, viz. :—

That an additional bill, containing all the particulars of the entry, with a reference thereto, be delivered to the collector by the person paying the duty, and that the bill be numbered with the entries for moneys, not duties, and the amount included in that branch of receipt.

RETURN FROM THE COMMISSIONERS OF INLAND REVENUE.

EXTRACT from an Advertisement published in various Newspapers throughout the Kingdom, dated the 5th April 1860, so far as regards the Stamp Duties imposed on DELIVERY ORDERS and DOCK WARRANTS.

“THE Commissioners of Inland Revenue deem it right to give public notice that by an Act passed on the 3d instant, 23 Vict. c. 15, the following stamp duties are now payable :—

“DELIVERY ORDER.—Any writing or document commonly called a Delivery Order, or by whatever name the same shall be designated, entitling or intended to entitle any person therein named, or his assigns, or the holder thereof, to the delivery of any goods, wares, or merchandise, of the value of Forty shillings or upwards, lying in any dock or port, or in any warehouse in which goods are stored or deposited on rent or hire, or upon any wharf, such writing or document being signed by or on behalf of the owner of such goods, wares, or merchandise, upon the sale or transfer of the property therein—duty 1 d.”

“DOCK WARRANT.—Any warrant or document commonly called a Dock Warrant, or any other writing or document, by whatever name the same shall be designated, which shall evidence the title of any person therein named, or his assigns, or the holder thereof, to the property in any goods, wares, or merchandise, lying in any dock or warehouse, or upon any wharf, such writing or document being signed or certified by or on behalf of the company or person in whose custody such goods, wares, or merchandise may be—duty 3 d.”

COPY of a Notice published in the Newspapers in January 1861, in regard to the Evasion of the Duty on Delivery Orders.

“ DELIVERY ORDERS.

“ To Dock Companies, Wharfingers, Warehousekeepers, Carriers, Merchants, and others.

“ THERE being reason for believing that the practice still extensively prevails of evading the stamp duties on Delivery Orders by the device of directing the delivery of the goods to be made, nominally, to the sellers themselves, and issuing the Orders without stamps :

“ The Commissioners of Inland Revenue take this mode of bringing to the attention of all persons whom it concerns the enactment contained in the 23d and 24th Vict. c. 111, passed with the view to suppress such fraudulent evasions.

“ The provisions of the Act are shortly as follows, viz. :—

“ Every Delivery Order shall be deemed to be made and given upon a sale or transfer, unless the contrary be expressly stated in it.

“ Any person who shall untruly state or signify in any Order that it is not made or given upon a sale of transfer, shall forfeit 20 l.

“ Any person who shall, by himself or his servant, or any other person, procure or require the delivery of the goods specified in an Order, knowing that it contains such untrue statement, shall forfeit 20 l.

“ The Commissioners desire it to be particularly noticed, that not only the giver of an Order of this kind, and the purchaser of the goods, or his agent, who acts upon it, but any public carrier, or other person who receives the goods for delivery at any other place than the shop or warehouse of the person who issues the Order, subjects himself to this penalty, as he cannot be ignorant of the fact of the transfer.

PAPERS relating to CLAIMS for LOSSES out of DANISH REPRISALS.

COPY of TREASURY MINUTE, dated 4 November 1834.

My Lords read the application of Mr. Shillito, requesting that the inquiries of the Commissioners for Danish Claims may not be limited to the claims of the sufferers by the confiscation of book debts only, but may be extended to various other classes of claims enumerated in his letter.

My Lords read also letters from Mr. Brandon, Mr. Mason, and Mr. Coure, on the same subject, and in which application is made for an extension of the period during which such claims may be presented.

My Lords read also their Minute of the 29th July 1834, authorising and directing the Commissioners of French Claims to receive and examine such claims for losses sustained by the sequestration and confiscation of book debts, the property of British subjects, by the Danish Government, in 1807; and expressing their opinion that no other claims should be received or entertained.

“ Upon further consideration, and bearing in mind that all my Lords have undertaken to do is to afford to the parties the advantage of establishing before the Commissioners the fact, that the loss for which compensation is claimed was sustained, and that my Lords are by no means pledged to recommend to Parliament the grant of any compensation on account of any of them; it appears to my Lords that it will, upon the whole, be more satisfactory that the whole subject should be at the same time before Parliament, in order that the House of Commons may have submitted to them the whole amount of the indemnity claimed by all those parties, together with a statement of the several classes into which such claims for compensation naturally divide themselves.

My Lords are pleased, therefore, without intending to express any opinion whatever as to the course which may be hereafter taken by Parliament, whether any or all of such classes of claims will be admitted, to direct that the means may be afforded to the parties making claims, to bring them forward for examination; and that the Commissioners for Danish Claims should be permitted, therefore, to receive all claims which may be presented to them; to class them under the several heads to which they appear most appropriately to belong; to examine the documents which may be produced by the several parties in support thereof; governing themselves in this matter by the regulations laid down in the Minute relating to the claims for losses occasioned by the confiscation of book debts, so far as such regulations apply to the nature of the proof to be produced and to the question of interest.

My Lords also desire that when all such claims are received and the examination completed, the Commissioners will report fully to my Lords thereupon, transmitting to my Lords schedules of the claims presented, and distinguishing those cases in which the parties have substantiated the fact of their having sustained loss, and the amount thereof, in order that the House of Commons may have the fullest information before it, whenever it shall again have its attention drawn to the subject.

My Lords are also of opinion, on the grounds stated in Mr. Mason's letter, that the period for presenting all claims should be extended for three months from the 12th instant.

COPY of NOTICE in "The London Gazette," of 7 November 1834.

Office of Commissioners for Examination of Danish Claims,
No. 5, Whitehall-place, 7 November 1834.

NOTICE is hereby given to all parties who suffered losses from the sequestration and confiscation of the property of British subjects by the Government of Denmark, in 1807, and who may be desirous of proving that such losses were sustained by them, that the Lords of the Treasury have authorised the Commissioners to receive and examine into all claims, whether arising from book debts or otherwise, which may be presented to them; and have extended the period during which parties may transmit their claims, accompanied by proofs, for the purpose of inquiry, to three months from the 12th day of November instant.

Chairman.

COPY of TREASURY MINUTE of 22 June 1838.

THE Chancellor of the Exchequer lays before the Board the copy of "An humble Address which has been presented by the House of Commons to Her Majesty, praying that Her Majesty will be graciously pleased to give directions to the Commissioners to whom it was referred to examine the claims of certain British subjects for losses sustained on account of book debts and other property confiscated by the Government of Denmark in the year 1807, that they shall examine the claims for losses sustained on account of seizures of ships and cargoes by the said Government in the said year, and that the said Commissioners shall report on such claims to the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury:" and he communicates at the same time to their Lordships Her Majesty's commands that the necessary steps shall be taken for complying with the prayer of the Address of the House of Commons.

Write to the Commissioners of Danish Claims, transmitting to them copy of the Address of the House of Commons, and desiring they will, in consequence of the commands given by Her Majesty to carry into effect the prayer of that Address, take the necessary steps for complying therewith, by examining and reporting upon the claims which shall be presented at their office, supported by proof, inserting an advertisement in "The London Gazette," for the purpose of giving information to all parties concerned, that they are authorised to examine claims for losses sustained on account of the seizures of ships and cargoes by the Danish Government in 1807, and to report thereupon to this Board, and giving notice in such advertisement that such claims, and the proofs in support thereof, must be delivered within three months from the date of the advertisement.

State to them at the same time, that when such claims shall have been examined, it is the desire of my Lords that they should report not only the amount of loss in each case, but also the particulars and nature of the several claims, and the principles on which they have proceeded to ascertain the facts, that my Lords may thereupon lay their report before the House of Commons in fulfilment of the commands of Her Majesty, and the prayer of the Address of the House of Commons.

Let a copy of this Minute be laid before the House of Commons.

COPY of MINUTE of TREASURY of the 5th day of July 1839, on the subject of the Danish Claims.

MY Lords read the letter from the Commissioners of Danish Claims, dated 6th February 1839, in which they inform my Lords that 90 claims have been preferred preferred to them for losses sustained by the seizure of British ships and cargoes, and for freight, amounting in the whole to 524,747 l. 18 s. 11 d., adding, that they felt themselves, in the then state of the inquiry, precluded by their instructions from proceeding to any judicial determination thereon.

My Lords advert to the Address adopted by the House of Commons, praying that Her Majesty would be graciously pleased to give directions that the Commissioners of Danish Claims should proceed to adjudicate upon the claims on which they have reported. The Viscount Melbourne informs the Board, that Her Majesty has been pleased to give Her commands that such adjudication should be made.

Write to the Commissioners of Danish Claims, and direct them to proceed with the examination of these several claims, and to a judicial determination thereon: at the same time inform the several claimants, that as their cases are excluded, by the opinion expressed by my Lords, in conformity with the advice of the law officers of the Crown, from the principle affirmed in the grants already made or submitted to Parliament, and as my Lords have felt it to be their duty to decline submitting any estimate to provide funds for their indemnification, it is to be distinctly understood, that no pledge is either given or implied by these proceedings that it is the intention of this Board to apply to the House of Commons to vote any sum on their behalf.

Call the attention of the Commissioners to certain points to which my Lords are of opinion they should advert in whatever report they may ultimately submit to this Board in reference to these claims. It appears by the Minute of 4th November 1834, that a full authority was given to the Commissioners to receive all claims for losses which might be presented to them, including no less book debts and goods ashore, for which provision is already made, than losses sustained by seizure of ships and cargoes. Under the latter head it appears that claims were advanced by 10 persons only, to the amount of 19,569 l. 7 s. 2 d., reduced by the Commissioners to 6,641 l. 6 s. 10 $\frac{1}{2}$ d.; whereas, by the account now under consideration, there appear to be 90 claimants to a gross amount of 524,747 l. 18 s. 11 d.

My Lords direct that the class of claimants under the Minute of 4th November 1834 should be distinguished from the others, and that inquiry should be made to show why the claims of the other parties were not submitted for consideration at the same time.

My Lords also desire that inquiry should be made into the fact, whether the claims are made bonâ fide on behalf of the persons who sustained the loss, or their representatives; and, if made by other parties, to whom such claims may have been made over or assigned, for what consideration such transfer or assignment shall have taken place.

My Lords direct also that inquiry should be in all cases made whether the ships and cargoes in question were or were not insured; and if they were not insured, what was the reason for such neglect.

My Lords feel this to be the more necessary, because they perceive in the schedule of claims, No. 3, where the loss sustained is stated to be the value of the ship "over and above the insurance;" No. 33, the amount of a policy of insurance; No. 51, the claim of the London Assurance Company for the sum of 2,300 l. paid on the cargo of the "Cecilia"; and No. 82, where the payment of insurances in 13 different cases, amounting to 2,866 l. 16 s. 1 d., is set forth.

In calling the attention of the Commissioners of Danish Claims to these several cases, my Lords wish to guard against expressing or inferring any opinion respecting them, or of excluding such other matters as shall appear to the Commissioners fitting subjects for inquiry and investigation.

Inasmuch as it is not the intention of my Lords to submit any vote to Parliament on the subject of these claims, and as, consequently, the remuneration of the Commissioners cannot be provided for in the manner adopted in reference to the former payments, inform the Commissioners that my Lords will make provision from other sources for rewarding their services, fixing the amount to be paid in analogy to the principles on which they have heretofore acted, but considering this new duty as separate and distinct from the functions with which they have been heretofore charged, and entitled to distinct remuneration.

REPORT of the COMMISSIONERS for the Investigation of DANISH CLAIMS, dated 12th May 1840, on the Claims for Losses sustained by the Seizure, by the Danish Government in 1807, of British Ships and Cargoes, together with Copies of the Schedules annexed, marked (A.) and (B.)

To the Right Honourable the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury, &c. &c.

Office of Danish Claims, Whitehall-place,
12 May 1840.

My Lords,

IN obedience to your Lordships' commands, conveyed to us in Mr. Baring's letter of the 9th July 1839, we have proceeded with and completed the judicial examination of the several claims preferred for losses sustained by the seizure, by the Danish Government in 1807, of British ships and cargoes.

In conformity with our instructions, we prefaced our communications to the several claimants by informing them that it was to be distinctly understood by them, that no pledge was either given or implied by these proceedings, that it was the intention of your Lordships to apply to the House of Commons to vote any sum on their behalf.

At the same time, we issued circular letters, in which we embodied the particular inquiries enjoined by your Lordships, for the purpose of ascertaining,—

1. Why the claims, preferred for the first time in 1838, had not been submitted to our consideration on the publication in the Gazette of the notice of the 12th November 1834 :

2. Whether any of the claims had been assigned to the parties preferring them : and,

3. Whether the ships and cargoes were or were not insured ; and if they were not insured, what reason could be assigned for such neglect.

In answer to these several inquiries, it was alleged,

1. That circumstances, of a similar nature to those which caused additional time to be granted to the claimants for book debts and goods ashore, existed in the present instance ; that the notice of the 12th November could not be considered as applicable to their case, inasmuch as no mention occurred in that notice of losses by seizure of ships and cargoes ; besides, that it was well known, in 1834, that the Government had no intention of entertaining their cases, and that many of the parties were even given to understand that the prosecution of their claims at the period in question would have been useless ; and, lastly, that the very circumstance of the publication of another notice, on the 10th of July 1838, was evidence to show that your Lordships did not consider the notice of the 12th November 1834 sufficient to enable the Commissioners to carry into effect the prayer of the Address to the Crown, of the 24th May 1838 :

2. That no assignment of a claim had taken place :

3. That where no insurance had been effected on the ship or cargo, the reasons were, that it was not the custom of the party to insure against any but sea risk ; or that insurance could not be effected, owing to the unexpected events of the period ; or that the insurance was void, from the circumstance of the vessel having been seized in port.

After these preliminary inquiries, we proceeded to the judicial investigation of the claims ; in the progress of which, we called, from time to time, for such evidence as appeared to us essentially necessary.

And, finally, on the 10th March last, we issued a circular letter, stating that all further evidence must be lodged at this office on or before the 10th of April.

We have now the honour of reporting to your Lordships the result of this judicial examination, which we have detailed in the two Schedules accompanying this Report, marked (A.) and (B.) ; the one containing the claims lodged in this office in 1834, the other those brought forward in 1838.

We have arranged the claims in both Schedules under the respective heads of ships, cargoes, freights and insurance ; and as our inquiries were directed to extend to the whole of the year 1807, we have thought it right to state in each instance, under another head, the date of the capture.

The Schedule which accompanied our Report of the 6th February 1839, contained 90 claims, which amounted to 524,747 l. 18 s. 11 d.

Many of these claims have since been disallowed in part ; many have been subdivided into separate cases ; and the result of the whole investigation is that we report 116 claims to be supported by proof, amounting to 225,126 l. 9 s. 10 d.

The remaining cases have been rejected for deficiency of proof.

In the judicial investigation of these claims, our object has been to ascertain the actual loss sustained, without taking into consideration any mercantile profit which might have been realized, if the seizures and confiscations made by the Danish Government had never taken place.

We have, therefore, determined the amounts of the several claims according to the bills of sale, invoices, bills of lading, charter-parties, and other original documents, showing the cost prices of ships and cargoes, and the rate of freights in 1807 ; and we have not adopted the Danish sales as criteria of value.

We have in no instance adjudicated upon a loss unless the parties or the representatives of the parties who sustained that loss, have appeared in some way before us, or have given authority for the prosecution of the claim.

Under the doubts, however, which your Lordships have impressed upon us, as to whether any indemnity for the claims in question would be ultimately conceded, we have refrained from putting the claimants to the expense of legally establishing their title as representatives of the parties originally interested, and have rested satisfied in the interim with prima facie evidence of the fact.

We have, &c.

(signed) Joseph Phillimore, Chairman.

W. Empson.

CORRESPONDENCE WITH THE TREASURY.

Sir,

Weirs and Hincksey Mills, near Oxford,
28 January 1861.

I TAKE the liberty to forward to you by this night's post, case and opinion of Counsel, respecting levying duties on sheathing paper, &c.; also the enclosed Memorial to the Lords of Her Majesty's Treasury.

Right Honourable W. E. Gladstone,
Chancellor of Exchequer.

I have, &c.
(signed) John Towle.

My Lords,

Hincksey Mill, 28 January 1861.

ON the 20th September 1859, I memorialised your Lordships through the Chancellor of the Exchequer, complaining, among other things, that the Board of Inland Revenue did not levy the paper duty on felt, and did not consider that the decision of the Court of Exchequer, in the case of the Attorney General v. Barry, in any way bound them to do so. In your reply, dated 10th November 1859, you vindicate the interpretation of the Board of Inland Revenue. Having taken the opinion of counsel on the subject of the liability of felt to paper duty, I forward a copy of the case, and of the opinion of Mr. Hoggins, Q. C., which is to the effect that “all flexible sheets manufactured from fibres adhering together,” are paper under the Act of Parliament.

This opinion clearly includes the felt used for sheathing ships and roofing houses, which has supplanted the pulped paper formerly manufactured for these purposes.

I, therefore, humbly request that you will reconsider your decision on this subject, and will either levy the duty on felt or take measures for submitting to the Court of Exchequer the question of its liability to taxation.

I have, &c.
(signed) John Towle.

C A S E.

MUCH difficulty has for some time been felt in deciding what fabrics come properly under the name of paper, so as to be liable to paper duty. The difficulty is continually increasing, not only from the variety of substances and of methods employed in manufacturing articles to subserve the purposes of paper, but because there is an actual premium, in the freedom from Excise duty, on any fabric which accomplishes the uses while evading the name of paper. There are several fabrics which may be called intermediate between paper and something else, and each hybrid specimen resembles, in different proportions, the two cognate fabrics. Thus pulp parchment, made of skins reduced to pulp, is more like parchment than paper, and, were parchment still taxed, would have probably been adjudged to be parchment. Thus felt, which is a fabric something between paper and woollen cloth, or rather between paper and shoddy, in many instances closely resembles paper, is used for the purposes of paper, and drives paper out of the market, by reason of its exemption from the tax to which paper is subjected.

Formerly a great business was done by paper makers in sheathing paper, used for roofing houses and sheathing ships. A specimen, A. 1, is sent herewith. Another specimen, A. 2, is mixed with tar, so as to be ready for use.

About the year 1832 a new fabric was invented for the same purpose, which being made by a different process from that employed in making paper, was called "roofing felt." B. is a specimen of felt, pitched ready for use. The roofing felt was left untaxed, and the trade in the taxed roofing paper very soon disappeared, almost entirely.

On the 11th of March 1846, Mr. John Dickenson, chairman of the Committee of Paper Makers, memorialised the Board of Excise, complaining of the exemption from duty of "a sort of roofing paper, to which the parties gave the name of roofing felt." Mr. Dickenson stated that the 17th section of 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 52, "was introduced to remove doubts as to the new sort of paper called 'roofing felt' being subject to duty."⁽¹⁾

"And be it further enacted, that all paper, button-board, millboard, pasteboard, and scaleboard (except scaleboard made from wood), of whatever materials made, and whether made by the materials being reduced to pulp, or by being pressed or otherwise manufactured, shall be deemed and taken to be paper," &c.

The Act did more; it provided that the patentees should not be affected by it till 11th October 1838.

The Excise officers, however, did not levy the duty, and in 1839 an Act being passed to regulate the manufacture of paper, the following section was inserted:—

"All paper, button-board, millboard, pasteboard, and scaleboard, of whatever materials made, and however manufactured, whether made by the materials being reduced to pulp, and moulded or finished by machinery, or by being pressed or intermixed in a dry state, and made to adhere by pressure or otherwise, shall be deemed and taken to be paper, &c., and shall be charged with duty accordingly."

Mr. Dickenson was consulted on the framing of this section, which was drawn expressly in order "to put the two different descriptions of roofing paper on the same footing."⁽²⁾ Still the roofing felt was not interfered with. On the 11th March 1846 Mr. Dickenson despatched his memorial, and on the following 4th April the Board of Excise called on the firm of McNeill & Co. to take out licenses as paper makers.⁽³⁾ The firm laid their case before Messrs. Peacock and Webster,⁽⁴⁾ and Mr. Carpmael made an elaborate report on the manufacture of felt.⁽⁵⁾ All these authorities were favourable to them, and they have since remained unmolested by the Excise; but the common sense interpretation of the word "paper" had a great influence on their decision. The words were that "paper was paper," however it was made, and of whatever materials, but they did not define paper. They presupposed that to be a matter of certainty, though it was the very matter in doubt. Paper had always been understood to be a vegetable production, and to present certain definite features on manipulation, such as smoothness and flexibility. Thus, Messrs. Peacock and Webster say, "that no fabric is within the 66th section of the 2 & 3 Vict. c. 23, unless it be substantially one of the articles therein enumerated."⁽⁶⁾

Mr. Carpmael considered two points essential to constitute paper; the vegetable nature of the materials and their minute subdivision, so as to be capable of mixing with water to form pulp. He says of the materials of the roofing felt,⁽⁷⁾—

"These fibres were not reduced by cutting or otherwise, nor were they of that character which would allow (in their then state), of being mixed with water so as to produce anything in the character of pulp; nor could a mixture of water and such fibres have been practically used in the manner of pulp for making paper."

And again,—

"I cannot for a moment bring myself to think that fibres not reduced into a state of minute subdivision in length, and therefore not capable of mixing with water to form pulp, can be considered paper, nor have fabrics so made ever been considered paper, or of the character of paper."

Speaking

(³) Ibid. p. 2.

(⁴) Ibid. p. 5.

(⁵) Ibid. p. 7.

(⁶) Ibid. p. 7.

(⁷) Ibid. p. 8.

“Speaking of the probability of the patented process being used with paper stuffs, he says—

“In such a case the result might, I think, be considered paper, and it would be paper from the circumstance of the fibre being vegetable, and from the circumstance of such fibres being in a highly reduced state, and from the circumstance that water would be used to dissolve the adhesive matter, &c.”

Mr. Carpmael even ventures to define paper,—

“A clear expression of what is paper under the Statute, would be to say that it is that fabric in sheets, made from vegetable fibres, where the fibres are so reduced or subdivided in length, as to make it capable of being reduced by water to pulp suitable for making paper.”

Here Mr. Carpmael decides that an article is paper on account of the materials from which it is made, and he describes those materials as being suitable for making paper. This is reasoning in a circle, and is very like the dictum of the Statute that all paper is paper. It makes, however, no allowance for the words “by being intermixed in a dry state and made to adhere by pressure or otherwise.”

The question was now at rest till 1857, when the Excise made another attempt to extend the definition of paper. Mr. Barry had taken fragments of the skins of animals, reduced them to pulp, and manufactured them into sheets by a process identical with that by which paper was then and is now made. These sheets, however, were not paper, but parchment. Baron Bramwell handling a deed, inscribed on it, declared that he should have called it parchment, had he not known how it was made. The Supreme Court of New Brunswick, moved to declare void a record that was written on it, under pretence that it was paper, decided that, to all intents and purposes it was parchment. Baron Bramwell, however, decided that it was paper, and on the 20th April 1859, the Court of Exchequer confirmed his judgment.

The Court interpreted the section of the Act, in which an attempt had been made to define paper. They decided that “all paper is paper” means whatever is made as paper is made, is paper, and they supported this construction by the temporary exemption of the patented article already referred to. This article, it will be recollected was not made in the way that paper is made.

“Now it is clear that the words of that Act, ‘however manufactured,’ and ‘of whatever materials made,’ are intended to extend the Statute to what it might not otherwise have comprehended. Reading the section as though they were not there, the result would be, ‘all paper, button-board, &c., shall be deemed to be paper, button-board, &c. Taken literally, that would mean merely that all paper is paper, a truism which gives very little information as to whether this be paper or not. The reasonable meaning is, that whatever is made as paper, button-board, &c. are made, of whatever materials and by whatever machinery, is paper, button-board, &c. within the meaning of the Act; and this construction is very much confirmed by the 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 52, s. 17, which expressly exempted from the paper duty, for a time, the manufacture made under the protest therein mentioned.”⁽⁸⁾—

The decision was unexpected, because no one taking pulp parchment in his hand would have dreamt of calling it paper without being first taught to do so. For the same reason, no one calls felt paper; but it is in the same category as pulp parchment. The judges said of the latter, “We think that this case is within the statute, whether the defendant’s manufacture is properly called paper or not:”⁽⁹⁾ and again, “But whether it be called paper or not, it appears to us to fall within the very large words of the statute, which was intended to comprehend everything that was made by means of pulp, of fibrous matter, and extended into sheets capable of being used as paper.”⁽¹⁰⁾

The roofing felt is used not only as paper but instead of paper, which, by reason of its freedom from taxation, it beats out of the market. It is made from fibrous matter, and extended into sheets. It is not made from pulp. But the judges cannot be supposed to have made the use of pulp a sine qua non, in defiance of the words of the Act. They give in this passage a description of pulp parchment, and say that that description is within the terms of the Act. Had they had under judgment sheets of fibrous matter made “by being intermixed in a dry state, and made to adhere by pressure or otherwise,” they must have held that also to be within the statute. A glance at the wording of section 66 shows that it means to include fibrous sheets made as paper is made, and fibrous sheets made in a way in which up to that time was not made. The construction which relies on the former must equally include the latter half of the sentence. Accordingly the judges give a description of paper which includes both:—

“Perhaps paper may be described fairly as a manufactured substance composed of fibres adhering together, in form consisting of sheets of various sizes and of different thicknesses, used for writing or printing, or other purposes to which flexible sheets are applicable.”⁽¹¹⁾

Felt is manufactured in sheets from fibres adhering together, and is used for the purposes of flexible sheets of paper, to wit, for roofing houses and sheathing ships.

⁽⁸⁾ Decision of the Court of Exchequer, Third Report of the Board of Inland Revenue, Appendix 8, p. xx.

⁽⁹⁾ Ibid. p. xxi.

⁽¹¹⁾ Ibid. p. xx.

It is submitted that the case will bear only one of three constructions :

1. That the Act of Parliament, though obscure, has been correctly interpreted by the judges ; such interpretation including as liable to duty all flexible sheets manufactured from fibres adhering together, whether made from pulp, as paper is made, or by being intermixed in a dry state, &c., as paper was not made in 1839, when the Act passed, including therefore the felt used for roofing houses and sheathing ships. Or,

2. That the judges meant that flexible sheets manufactured from fibres adhering together came under the Act only when made from pulp, as paper is made, excluding such sheets if made "by being intermixed and made to adhere by pressure or otherwise," in defiance of the words of the Act. Consequently that the decision of the Court of Exchequer requires to be submitted to revision. Or,

3. That the Act of Parliament is unintelligible, that the confusion arising thereby has not been dispelled by the judges, and that the Board of Inland Revenue and the Treasury are bound to apply to the Legislature to make it clear on what fabrics the paper duty is to be levied.

Your opinion is asked on these three hypotheses, and generally on the whole case.

OPINION.

In my opinion, the case of the Attorney-General v. Barry was well decided by the Court of Exchequer, and its judgment delivered 20th April 1859, binding on all parties.

Paper is there defined "as a manufactured substance, composed of fibres adhering together, in form consisting of sheets of various sizes and of different thicknesses, used for writing or printing or other purposes to which flexible sheets are applicable." The words of the Act are, "however manufactured and of whatever material made;" and extend the statute for paper duty beyond what was contemplated by previous statutes. It is now, by statute law, immaterial whether the substance is manufactured partly or in whole from vegetable or animal matter: the words of the statute comprehend anything that is made by means of pulp or fibrous matter extended into sheets capable of being used as paper.

Any attempt to limit or alter that decision would, in my opinion, fail. The question is not what may be paper in common parlance or ordinary acceptance of the word, but what manufacture shall be by statute liable to duty, and the words of the statute include as liable to duty all flexible sheets manufactured from fibres adhering together, whether made from pulp as paper is made, or by being intermixed in a dry state, &c., as paper was not made in 1839.

My Lords,

I BEG to forward to your Lordships a copy of a case which I have laid before counsel, and Mr. Hoggins's opinion thereon.

Before resorting to either of the modes there indicated for obtaining redress, I humbly solicit that you will reconsider the unfavourable decision which you announced to me in your letter of 10th November 1859.

CASE.

Mr. John Towle of Weir and Hincksey Mills, Oxford, is a paper maker, who formerly did a good business in the manufacture of bandboxes. These were made of boxboard, which is a sort of stiff paper manufactured from old ropes, inferior rags, &c., by being reduced to pulp and then drawn out in sheets. Other bandboxes were made from a different material; namely, from pieces of thin wood, each side of which was pasted over with paper. This is called scaleboard. Both were liable to paper duty. Both paid paper duty; and Mr. Towle's business in bandboxes was extensive and profitable. The duty on scaleboard was remitted, and Mr. Towle's bandboxes were driven out of the market. The remission was repealed by the Legislature, but the Board of Inland Revenue have disregarded the Act of Parliament; the duty is collected on boxboard; is not collected on scaleboard. The scaleboard manufacture is flourishing; the boxboard manufacture scarcely exists.

The 1 Geo. 4, c. 58, s. 5, distinctly imposes a duty on scaleboard. It enacts:—

"That all and every maker and makers of paper, millboard, button-board, button paper, glazed paper, sheathing paper, pasteboard, or scaleboard," shall comply with certain regulations for the securing of the duty "in marking, writing, or printing on every ream of paper and parcel of millboard, button-board, button paper, glazed paper, sheathing paper, pasteboard, and scaleboard."

But the 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 52, s. 17, exempted "scaleboard made from wood" (all scaleboard being made from wood); and enacted "that all paper, glazed paper, sheathing paper, button paper, button-board, millboard, pasteboard, and scaleboard (except scaleboard made from wood), of whatever materials made, and whether made by the materials being reduced to pulp and moulded, or, by being pressed or otherwise manufactured, shall be deemed and taken to be paper, glazed paper, sheathing paper, button paper, button-board, millboard, pasteboard, and scaleboard, within the meaning of this Act and the Acts for securing the duties of excise on paper, and shall be charged with duty accordingly."

Three years afterwards this exemption was repealed by the 2 & 3 Vict. c. 23, which enacted,—

"That all paper, button-board, millboard, pasteboard, and scaleboard, of whatever materials made, and by whatever denomination known or called, and however manufactured," &c. "shall be deemed and taken to be paper, button-board, millboard, pasteboard, and scaleboard, within the meaning of this Act, and shall be charged with duty accordingly."

The Board of Inland Revenue have, however, acted as if this section had no existence. They have allowed anybody, not a papermaker, to make hatboxes of scaleboard, that is, of thin wood with paper pasted on each side of it, without paying any duty, except that charged on the paper. The Commissioners lay this down clearly in a letter, dated 24th August 1854, to Mr. Samuel Maples, solicitor, Nottingham:—

"Any person, except a papermaker, within a mile of his mill, may buy or make scaleboard from wood, cover it on each side with duty-paid paper, and then sell it to boxmakers, without being liable to extra duty, or a penalty."⁽¹⁾

This is in the teeth of the Act of Parliament which taxes "scaleboard of whatever materials made, and by whatever denomination known or called, and however manufactured."

A Return has been made to Parliament of all exemptions and drawbacks from paper duty, made by Treasury order, but among these is no mention of scaleboard.⁽²⁾

On the 6th June 1859, Mr. Towle memorialised the Board of Inland Revenue, pointing out that the exemption of scaleboard made from wood was repealed by the 2 & 3 Vict. c. 23, s. 66, and demanding that the tax should be enforced in justice to the boxboard makers, who, himself included, were injured by this unfair competition. The Board did not deny that the exemption had been repealed, but they thought Mr. Towle did not understand his own business, and that the decision of the Legislature was not a sufficient reason for altering their proceedings. They wrote, 10th June 1859:—

“As to scaleboard, the Commissioners think that you are mistaken in supposing that pasteboard could compete with it for hatboxes; they also consider that there is no sufficient reason for re-imposing a duty on the scaleboard manufacture.”⁽³⁾

(³) Correspondence relative, &c., p. 12.

And again they write, 11th July 1860:—

(⁴) Ibid. p. 13.

“As scaleboard was exempted from duty in 1836, and has never been charged since, they must decline taking any steps to charge it now with duty.”⁽⁴⁾

In reply to a further memorial from Mr. Towle, the Lords of the Treasury decline to grant redress, under the plea that the Board have not misinterpreted the law. They say, “their Lordships see no reason to suppose that the law has been misinterpreted by the Board of Inland Revenue.”⁽⁵⁾ So far as scaleboard was concerned, the complaint is not that the Board misinterpret the law, but that they knowingly violate it.

(⁵) Ibid. p. 15.

This disregard of the Act of Parliament, by a Government department, seems to require explanation. Acts of Parliament regulating the Excise are drawn up by the Board of Inland Revenue, and in drawing the particular section in question they were endeavouring to make felt liable to paper duty. In doing this they unintentionally re-imposed (as justice required) the duty on scaleboard; but the operation of the section being unintentional, it has consequently never been acted upon. This explanation of the conduct of the Board is suggested by their own confession of a similar course, as regards the survey of cardmakers. These last were exempted by 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 52, but the exemption was repealed by 2 & 3 Vict., c. 23. This exemption was omitted accidentally, and the survey has never been reimposed. The Board writes:—

“The provisions for subjecting pasteboard makers to Excise survey were re-enacted, but without the exemption of cardmakers. It seems, however, that this omission had not been intentional on the part of the Board, and that they considered it unnecessary and inexpedient to bring under survey those cardmakers who had been exempt under the law previously in force.”⁽⁶⁾

(⁶) Third Report of the Board of Inland Revenue.

As in the execution of the Excise Acts the subject is deprived of the protection of the ordinary courts of law, so in their framing he is deprived of the protection of Parliament. The Board of Excise have become judge, jury, and Parliament, all in one.

Your opinion is asked—

1. Whether scaleboard made from wood is liable to duty under the 2 & 3 Vict., c. 23?

2. If scaleboard is liable to duty, is it lawful for the Board of Inland Revenue, either of their own mere motion, or by the authority of a Treasury Order, to exempt scaleboard from taxation, to the detriment of a rival article which is taxed?

3. If the exemption of scaleboard from taxation is illegal, what remedy has Mr. Towle for the destruction of his trade, and in what manner can he compel the Board of Inland Revenue and the Lords of the Treasury to levy on scaleboard the tax imposed by Act of Parliament?

Third Report of the Commissioners of Inland Revenue.

OPINION.

1st. I am of opinion that scaleboard made from wood is liable to duty under the 2 & 3 Vict. c. 23. Duty was imposed by the 1 Geo. 4, c. 58, s. 5, on scaleboard; and all scaleboard, except scaleboard made from wood, was subject to duty by the 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 52, s. 17.

These Acts show that scaleboard made from wood was scaleboard liable to duty under the first Act, because it is excepted from duty under the second Act.

Then the 2 & 3 Vict. c. 23, imposes a duty on all scaleboard of whatever material made. There is no exception, and if made of wood, or any other material, all scaleboard is liable to duty.

The Board of Inland Revenue seem to consider in their letter of 24th August 1854, that they discharge the exigency of the Act if the paper covering the scaleboard of wood be cut & paid paper, but if the duty paid on that paper is not equal to the duty charged on scaleboard of whatever materials made, they only partially execute the exigency of the Act.

The

The Board appear to be aware that they depart from the Act; but intimate by their letter of June 1859, that it is not expedient to reimpose the duty. Expediency or inexpediency is no part of their functions. If it be necessary or proper to exempt wood scaleboard, it can only be done by Act of Parliament. Their duty as officers of the Crown is to execute the Act as printed.

2d. I am of opinion that it is not lawful for the Board to exempt scaleboard made from wood from duty.

3d. It seems by the statement in the case, that Mr. Towle is aggrieved by this partial administration of the duties. He can no longer compete with wood scaleboard manufacture, because he pays duty and the other does not. He has represented his grievance, and the Board decline to put the two manufactures on the same footing as to duty. The Lords of the Treasury decline to interfere. This would seem to intimate that there is some powerful reason influencing the judgment of those who are charged with the collection of duties according to the Act. But Mr. Towle is entitled by law to say, that others and himself equally within the Act, shall be equally taxed.

The House of Commons imposed the duty, and they can inquire (by Committee, or as they see fit) whether the Act is fairly and fully executed, and if a grievance is found of partial execution of the law, they can procure redress.

The sovereign, however, is the great executive power to see all laws equally extended to all subjects of the realm.

If the state of things is so strong a grievance to Mr. Towle, and I suppose, therefore, to others engaged in the same or similar manufacture, as to justify some unusual and extraordinary exertion to get redress of a serious injury, it appears to me that they may petition the Queen to redress their grievance occasioned by Her Majesty's servants partially, as they say, executing the revenue laws, by which some of Her Majesty's subjects are free from payment of duty directly charged by Act of Parliament, and others greatly impoverished by its imposition on their manufacture, both, by law, being bound to pay the same duty.

The gentleman charged with preparing the petition will consider to what extent it should be governed and controlled by the 23 & 24 Vict. c. 34, or whether it should proceed wholly on the ground by law, that every subject may petition for redress of a grievance which this statute does not seem to take away or alter.

In writing upon these papers I am not informed whether any Act of Parliament confers on the Board of Revenue any power of suspending the duties charged by the Act; if there be any such I wish to be referred to them.

C. Hoggins.

Temple, 1 February 1861.

Sir, Treasury Chambers, 23 February 1861.

I HAVE laid before the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury your application of the 28th ultimo, and its enclosures on the question of the liability of felt to paper duty, and I am desired by my Lords to acquaint you, in reply, that they are not prepared to give any new directions in this matter.

I am, &c.

REPORT - - - - -	3
APPENDIX - - - - -	53

REPORT of the PROCEEDINGS of the REGISTRAR of FRIENDLY SOCIETIES in England, in his Office of Registrar, and of the principal Matters transacted by FRIENDLY SOCIETIES, which have come under his cognizance during the past year, and of the particulars of every Award made under the provisions of the 23 & 24 Vict. c. 58, s. 1 & 2.

DURING the year 1860 the Registrar has examined and certified the Rules of 1,100 Friendly Societies, and also the alterations of the Rules of 1,140 Societies.

Report.

Fifty Societies have deposited their Rules with the Registrar under the 44th section of 18 & 19 Vict. c. 63.

Notices of dissolution have been received from 70 Societies during the year ending 31 December 1860, of which number 66 were in England and 4 in Wales. All of those dissolved since the passing of 23 and 24 Vict. c. 58 (6 August 1860), have been advertised in the "London Gazette" pursuant to the 3d section of that Act.

During the year 1860 the sum of 1,151*l.* 17*s.* 8*d.* in the Bank of England, and in Savings Banks, has been transferred into the names of Trustees appointed by Friendly Societies, in the places of others removed, absent, &c., pursuant to 18 & 19 Vict. c. 63, s. 36.

Since the Registrar's last Report, no Act of Parliament has passed relating to these Institutions, although two Bills were brought into the House of Commons, the one relating to the Accounts of Friendly Societies, the other to Industrial and Provident Societies, the provisions of which will be hereafter referred to.

INSTRUCTIONS, prepared by the Registrar, with a view to the establishment of FRIENDLY SOCIETIES upon sound principles, and which will be found in the APPENDIX, have been very widely circulated, and will, no doubt, be the means of calling the attention of the Clergy, and others interested in these Institutions, as well as of the working classes themselves, to the unsound principles upon which the majority of the Friendly Societies or Clubs are formed, and that they have, and will lead to the establishment of Friendly Societies upon sounder principles principles than they have hitherto been, particularly with respect to superannuation or OLD AGE pay.

Report.

From the numerous communications and complaints made to the REGISTRAR by parties who, in the country, have, through Agents and Collectors, joined Societies established in London and other large towns, he would again caution the working classes from becoming Members of such Societies, of the respectability of the Officers and Managers of which they know nothing; they are seldom, if ever, supplied with a copy of the Rules, but only a card, upon which their weekly or monthly payments are entered, and in case of a claim arising, payment is resisted on one pretext or another, and the member, or his widow, or child, is informed, for the first time, that the only remedy for enforcing the claim is by referring the dispute to Arbitrators living in the locality in which the Society is established, perhaps 100 miles off, in addition to which, Alterations are made in the Rules, at a meeting, of which they have no notice, and could not, therefore, have attended.

By the 23 & 24 Vict. c. 58, s. 7, it is enacted, that if the General Statement, or copy of the last Annual Report, mentioned in 18 & 19 Vict. c. 63, s. 45, is not transmitted to the Registrar before the 1st of June in each year, the officer making default is liable to a penalty not exceeding 20 s., with costs. In the month of December 1860, the Registrar sent by post to 22,948 Societies the form of such general statement; but to the date of the present report he has not received more than 8,140 General Statements and Annual Reports. It is his intention not to allow this section of the Act to be a dead letter, but to take proceedings for the recovery of the penalties against the secretaries of some of those societies, who, upon a second application, shall neglect to comply with the provisions of the law. If the officer of a Friendly Society does not prepare an Annual Statement for the members, it is necessary that he should be compelled to do so, or to fill up and return to the Registrar the form of general statement sent; and if such Annual Statement is prepared, there can be no excuse for the non-transmission of a copy to the Registrar. From communications made to the Registrar, it is quite evident that the neglect to comply with the provisions of the Act, arises from the fact, that the investment of the funds in some instances, and the application of them in others, have been contrary to law, and might subject the secretary or other officers to penalties; but the object of requiring such returns was with a view of discovering whether the provisions of the Acts of Parliament liament and rules of the society were strictly attended to. It is most essential for the protection of the members that the annual statement be prepared and sent to the Registrar.

In the last Session, Mr. SOTHERON ESTCOURT brought in, on 8th May 1861, a Bill "to require all Friendly and Assurance Societies to render to every member thereof, or person depositing money therein, a copy of their Annual Accounts." By s. 2, the balance sheet or statement was to contain a true account of the condition of the society in the following particulars:—

- Amount of Receipts during the year, gross and net.
- Amount of Expenditure during the year, distinguishing the sums paid to officers, or for management, gross and net.
- Date of Establishment.
- Total Sums received since establishment.
- Total Sums expended since establishment.
- Assets, distinguishing each head of invested capital.
- Liabilities, distinguishing each head of assurance or benefit.
- Number of Members, or Persons having a claim on account of money paid to the Society.

This Bill was subsequently withdrawn, but it appears to the Registrar that some such provisions are absolutely necessary, that every person interested in the Solvency of a society should be furnished with information of the accounts and condition thereof, year by year, which is not the case at present in very many societies.

Two examples may suffice:—

FROM the Quinquennial Return to 31 December 1860, of a Friendly Society called the Friend in Need Life and Sick Society, made to the Registrar during this year, it appears that the total number of Chief Office, Liverpool, 14 February 1861.

In some proceedings connected with this last-mentioned society at the County Court in Liverpool on the 15th June 1861, it was stated by the advocate on the part of the society that it had 250,000 members, 250 districts, and 1,500 collectors, and the total amount of business done by the society during the year 1860 was 45,000 l. The foregoing balance-sheets appear very unsatisfactory to the Registrar; in neither of them is there any statement as to the NUMBER OF MEMBERS or amount of the LIABILITIES of the society. In the FRIEND IN NEED SOCIETY it is stated in one of their advertisements, 464. A 4 that that in the last year 30,000 members have been enrolled, and by the quinquennial return it appears that there were on 31 December 1860, 81,005 policies in existence, and although the receipts are about 27,000 l., the expenses of management are about 10,000 l., and the payments for deaths, &c., nearly 12,000 l.; the available cash to answer liabilities is stated to be 17,430 l. 16 s. 10½ d., but this consists of 6,793 l. 6 s. 11½ d. in hands of agents for payments at sickness and death; 5,895 shares at 17 s. 6 d. per share, 5,158 l. 2 s. 6 d.; value of stock, fittings of offices, &c., 1,150 l.; Loans to members, 2,088 l. 12 s. 2 d.; the cash in hands of the Loan and Finance Committee, 659 l. 17 s. 10¾ d.; and in the London and County Bank, &c., 1,580 l. 17 s. 4 d. In the ROYAL LIVER FRIENDLY SOCIETY, although there are about 250,000 members, the available cash from the balance-sheets appears to be about 12,200 l., including 3,400 l. lent to members and in the hands of the officers; but there is no statement as to the liabilities of the society, and there is no distinct account, as there ought to be, of each head of expense.

Neither of the balance-sheets of these societies contain the names of the Trustees or other Officers. From documents in the Registrar's office, it appears that the trustees of the Friend in Need Society are Michael Weeden, optician, 27, Camden-street, Islington; William Whitehorne, tailor, 8, Charles-street, Kensington, and George William Wheeler, 471, Oxford-street, Bloomsbury, accountant; and those of the Royal Liver Friendly Society are Walter Fergus MacGregor, engineer, Eton Lodge, Wavertree, Liverpool; J. G. Rathbone, Yew Tree Farm, Ollerton, merchant; and Charles Edward Rawlins, jun., 1, Windermere-terrace, Princes Park, Liverpool, Esquires.

The following is the report of the Midland Railway Friendly Society, held at Derby, with a general abstract of receipts and disbursements to 30 June 1861, which appears to the Registrar to afford a good example of the mode in which accounts of large societies should be prepared and published. The Trustees are Samuel Beale, Esq., M.P.; John Ellis, Esq., Belgrave, near Leicester; and William Evan Hutchinson, Oadby Hill, near Leicester, gentleman, and G. N. Brown, Esq., treasurer. The Proprietors and Board of Directors subscribe 500 l. per annum.

MIDLAND RAILWAY FRIENDLY SOCIETY.

Report.

REPORT.

In submitting their report for the past year to the general committee, the managing committee have great pleasure in referring to the satisfactory position and prospects of the society. Since its establishment to the 1st of July last, 3,239 members have been admitted, being an increase during the past year of 974, and there is still every probability of a progressive addition to that number.

There have been 7 accidental, and 15 ordinary or natural deaths of members during the last year, on account of which 325*l.* has been paid; and the amount paid on account of sickness, during the same period, has been 1,995*l.* 19*s.* 9*d.* The committee have made a further investment of 600*l.*, in debentures of the Midland Railway Company; the total amount now so invested, being 1,500*l.*, bearing interest of at the rate of 4 per cent. per annum.

The total income of the society during the 12 months, has been 3,753*l.* 8*s.* 10*d.*, and the expenditure during the same period, including liabilities, has been 3,189*l.* 0*s.* 1*d.*, leaving a balance on the year's transactions of 564*l.* 8*s.* 9*d.*, which added to the balance of 917*l.* 16*s.* 1*d.*, brought from last year, makes a balance of 1,482*l.* 4*s.* 10*d.* to be carried forward to next account.

Isaac Morley,

After the general abstract a list is given of the names of members who have received benefits during the year ending 30th June 1861, with the amount paid to each member, and the total payments at each station; and a summary of the whole payments.

From communications received by the Registrar, it appears that in France, one of every 76 of the inhabitants, is a member of a Friendly Society; in Belgium, one of every 66; and in England and Wales, one of every 9.

Though in several of the old societies, the system of compelling members to pay a monthly sum for drink, and to the annual feast, is still continued, yet in some of them it has been discontinued; and in all Friendly Societies established since the 18 & 19 Vict. c. 63 (1855), no such rule can be certified, or such payment enforced. During the past year, the Registrar has received notice of the removal of several societies from public houses to school rooms or private rooms hired for the purpose. The Registrar had lately occasion to inquire into some facts with reference to Friendly Societies in the county of Hereford; and he ascertained that in that county,

Report.

136 societies had had their rules certified since 1793. Of that number, 123 were held at public-houses, and 13 at schools or private rooms; of the 123, no less than 42 had been dissolved, but of the 13, only one.

The old societies formed on what is generally known as Birmingham Societies, viz., where an annual division of the funds is made, leaving in hand, generally, a sum of 2*s.* 6*d.* per member, are open to great objections, which were fully explained in the Registrar's Report for 1858; since which, his attention has been called to the provisions of the 18 & 19 Vict. c. 63, s. 13, and he cannot now certify the rules of any such society, unless the rule for the division is made subject to the provisions of 18 & 19 Vict. c. 63, s. 13, which provides, "That no division or appropriation of any part of the stock thereof, except for the purpose of carrying into effect the general interests and objects declared in the rules, as originally certified, unless the claim of every member is first fully satisfied, or adequate provision be made for satisfying such claims."

By an order of the House of Lords of the 16th May 1861, a return was required of the number of Certificates given by each of the Registrars of Friendly Societies in ENGLAND, SCOTLAND, and IRELAND, to rules and alterations of rules of FRIENDLY and INDUSTRIAL SOCIETIES, since the passing of the 18 & 19 Vict. c. 63, (23 July 1855), distinguishing each year separately; also the number of FRIENDLY Societies whose rules are now in the custody of each of the said Registrars. This return will be found in the APPENDIX.

In ENGLAND, from the 23 July 1855 to 16 May 1861, the Registrar has certified the Rules of 5,113 Friendly Societies, and given 5,537 Certificates to Friendly Societies who have made alterations in rules previously certified. In SCOTLAND, the number of societies certified from September 1855 to 16 May, was 182, and of alterations of rules 192. In IRELAND, the number of Societies certified from 23 July 1855 to 16 May 1861, was 324, and of alterations of rules, 192. On the 16th May 1861, the number of FRIENDLY SOCIETIES whose rules and alterations were in the custody of each of the said Registrars was, in ENGLAND, 51,548; in SCOTLAND, 897, and in IRELAND 1,819.

It does not appear from this Return, how many Industrial Societies have been certified in Scotland or Ireland. In ENGLAND, the REGISTRAR has, since the 30th of June 1852, certified the rules of 427 of these Societies, and also the alterations of the rules of 39.

Of

Of late years, several of the Railways have established Benefit Societies for the employés on the line, and in the APPENDIX, will be found remarks on several of such societies, with the table of their contributions and benefits, as well as the heads of proposed laws of the London and North Western Railway General Benefit Society, upon which the Registrar was consulted in the beginning of this year.

THE following letter was sent to the REGISTRAR on the subject of BURIAL CLUBS, and published in one of the Chester papers.

It is the policy of the upholders of burial clubs to assume that the objections to that kind of insurance relate to the practice of deliberate murder of children by their parents, for the sake of the funeral money. They point to the small number of convictions for such murders, and ask what ratio they bear to the infant mortality of the country. Now, if this were the true ground of attack and defence, it might be enough to say that the occurrence of any murders of helpless children for the burial money should at once cause a change of plan, by which burial charges should be provided for, without putting the temptation of profit in the way of parents or nurse, and also that murders of any specific class always are rare. As Judge Alderson and other witnesses before the committee on this subject observed, murders at all ages and from all causes are so few, no one judge or coroner has had many brought before him. The child murders, in connexion with burial clubs, however few, were enough to fix the attention of judges and coroners upon the subject, and to induce them to advise that the insurance should be so managed as that the object should be gained, clear of the evils which now attend the method of insurance. Judge Alderson proposed that as the members of the clubs often object to manage the funerals, and say that there would be jobbing in the societies, the parents should be allowed to bury the child, as now, but that, instead of their receiving amounts of money far above any possible expense of interment, the bills should be sent in to the club. The rate of insurance would thus be lowered, a proper funeral would be provided, and the transaction would be safe from scandal and suspicion.

But the fact is, the charge is not that of murder. Such an amount of infant mortality as belongs to burial clubs could not possibly proceed from murder. All evidence and every man's unbiassed reason shows that such mortality must arise from preventible causes, and that murder cannot be answerable for more than a sprinkling of the deaths. The preventible causes which carry off thousands of children every year act more strongly in burial clubs than anywhere else, and hence such alterations as have been made in the law within a few years.

Fewer of the children in burial clubs ought to die than in society outside the clubs, for the rules exclude sickly children from the insurance, and also they do not allow them to be entered under two months old. A large proportion of infant deaths occur under two months old, and extreme infancy and sickness being thus excluded, the mortality of children in the clubs ought to be considerably less than the general average, yet it is considerably greater. It is sometimes attempted to hide this truth by mixing up the amount of infant deaths with the general mortality in Friendly Societies, which is considerably under the average, from the members being, on the whole, picked men and women, and of so much sobriety and respectability of character as is indicated by provident habits. The only fair way of studying the subject is to compare the mortality of children in burial clubs with that of children of the same ages in the same rank of life elsewhere. When this is done impartially and accurately the result is astounding.

In order to be quite fair it is necessary to remember that there is more death among young children in the labouring classes than in any other. It is not our business at this moment to remark on the causes and quality of this fact, which we may hope will cease to be a fact some day. We state it now as guidance to a just method of comparison. Surely nothing can be more liberal towards burial clubs than to take the case of a healthy and prosperous town, where the working classes earn 16s. or more per week, and contrast it with the very poorest and lowest working population we have, and see how the children fare in the two cases. The reason for selecting the very poorest set of people is, that, as to them, we are sure that they are in no clubs. They are too poor to subscribe to anything, and are out of the sphere of provident habits altogether.

The lowest order of labourers, as to pay and comfort, in our time, is supposed to be the proverbial Dorsetshire labourers. Their condition has improved a little of late, but at the time when their numbers were taken, they were receiving from 6s. to 9s. per week, and their families were therefore ill fed, ill clothed, and ill sheltered. Infants have a poor chance under such circumstances; yet how many die in comparison with the Lancashire infants registered in burial clubs? The latter are fourfold the number of the former. In a town so healthy as Preston, where the health and longevity of the inhabitants are remarkable, four times as many children in the hundred die in the burial clubs, as in the poor hovels of Dorsetshire labourers. The Dorsetshire parents may have to get their dead infants buried by the parish, or by private charity; but they keep three alive for each one that dies, in comparison with the Lancashire parents. In Preston, eighteen in a hundred of the children born in the upper class die before five years old. In the middle class, 36 or 37 per cent. In the labouring class, 55 to 60 per cent. die, taking them all round and from the day of birth. And how many die of those healthy infants, past the danger of the first two months who are in burial clubs? From 62 to 64 per cent. In the same healthy districts where the infants of labouring men outside the clubs die at the rate of 36 in the hundred before five years,—do children of the same age who are insured in the burial clubs die at the rate of from 62 to 64 per cent.?

If inexperienced persons ask how this happens, more experienced people can tell, only too well. It is a disadvantage to an infant at the outset to be looked upon as subject for burial. Parents who pay a monthly sum to bury a child grow accustomed to the idea of its dying, dying, and this alone is enough to doom a child in sickness, or in a delicate state. If the money were paid with a view to the child living, its chance would be far better, and hence Judge Alderson's advice that a life fund should be always coupled with a death fund. The inducement should certainly be on the side of the child living, and not on the side of its death. We never in a long course of years have met with any officer or member of a burial club who did not say, if asked, that parents should be restricted from subscribing to more than one club. Experience has taught them that much. They see what the inducement must be in the case of that speculative father in Manchester who, before the law was altered, entered his children in 19 burial clubs. They see how Rodda came to murder his infant. It is a pity they cannot see on which side the inducement lies when, as at present, the parents receive 6*l.* for a funeral which should cost only 25*s.* If they would go the surgeons' round with him, or the district visitors', or if they would hear what is the talk of women who take in poor children to nurse, they would soon learn some things that they ought to know. They would hear parents comforting themselves over a sick child, that it is in the burial club. They would hear the surgeon told, when he intimates that a child is dangerously ill, that it is in the burial club. Yet worse, he will hear mothers and nurses refuse to call in medical advice, because the child is in a burial club. In other words, there is no use in spending money in trying to make the child better, as the subscription for its funeral has been paid. These things are facts; and they fully account for the repeated anxiety to alter the law. The infants of the working classes have, as we see, but a poor chance at best, compared with what those of other classes have, and with what they therefore might have; but, when to the ordinary disadvantages are added the apathy occasioned by the expectation that the child will die, the carelessness of the nurse who, in such a case, does not bestir herself to carry it through as if its life were the great object, and the cupidity of dull, ignorant, and poor parents, to whom a sum of 6*l.* or 10*l.* is a temptation to neglect a sickly infant, which besets them day and night; and it is no wonder that from six to eight per cent. more infants die in the clubs than outside of them.

There is no force or pertinence in the question, "What is to be done with all fire and life insurances if burial clubs are not to be allowed?" The temptation to arson for the sake of the fire insurance is rare and a mere trifle in comparison with the benefits arising from insurance from fire, and the mischief done by the crime is not of the irreparable kind which marks the destruction of human life. This is shown to be the sense of the Legislature by the prohibition which was passed 30 years ago, to insure any life where the death could possibly be profitable to the insurer. In this case the Legislature has, as Mr. Cheetham proposes, made a dead set at the practice of speculating on the death of another, and we have only to hope that Parliament will extend the safeguard to the case of the labouring class, still exposed where the children of the rich are protected.

As for what would become of society if burial clubs were abolished, society would, in our opinion, be just so much the better. There is no fear of the practice of mutual assurance ever dying out. There will always be scope for the provident habit, and in that direction, but the object will be better chosen. The avidity of the working classes for burial clubs, to the neglect of better methods of insurance, is a painful circumstance in our natural condition. Our educated classes feel it so; strangers who visit us feel it so; Parliament and our public departments feel it so. Government has set before the working classes five benefits which it approves and favours as the objects of Friendly Societies; and the object of the burial club is not among them. These benefits are, medical attendance, weekly allowance in sickness till the age of 60, an annuity after 60, or on other conditions. Life insurance, in connexion with some established office; and lastly, endowments for children. This last ought to supersede the burial subscription among parents who are worthy of the name. Instead of providing to bury the child which ought not to die, they should provide for its receiving, at the fitting time, a sum to apprentice the boy or girl, or to set them up in some occupation. If it is still desired to make provision for decent burial, it can be done harmlessly, by any one of the several methods spoken of above, and advised by high authorities. The existing method is so clearly unfavourable to the life of the children and the morals of the parents, that it must soon be amended by the conscience and common sense of society. From all the evidence yet collected, it is clear to us that in proportion to the spread of the best order of Friendly Societies will be the discredit of burial clubs; and that the funerals along our ways will sensibly decrease when parents subscribe to benefit the lives of their children, instead of speculating on their deaths. By insuring the endowment recommended by Government, they secure the means of burial, by the money that would be returned. But this is an inferior consideration. The main truth is that men are born to live; and that the duty of parents is to make their children live, if possible; and this can best be done by supposing that they are to live, and by making every provision, and lending every effort to that end.

In November 1860 the Secretary of Court Braddyl, No. 791, of the Ancient Order of Foresters Friendly Society, held at the Dun Cow Inn, South Hetton, Durham, applied to the Registrar for his signature to two copies of the Court Rules for the use of the Trustees, who had to attend a trial on some matters connected with the Court. On examination and comparison with the copy in the Registrar's office, it appeared that the Rules issued to the Court Braddyl were spurious, and that no less than twelve new Rules had been illegally added. The Registrar's duty was to have proceeded under the 29 s. of 18 & 19 Vict. c. 63, but as it appeared that the person who had been the principal instrument in its commission had committed suicide, and the Court gave up the remaining 124 copies of the Rules to be destroyed, no proceedings were taken.

In the month of January 1861 the attention of the Registrar

was called to the fact that the Corresponding Secretary of the Alston District of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, Manchester Unity, had, either by a misunderstanding or some oversight, issued copies of the certified District Rules, in which no fewer than eleven rules were improperly omitted, thereby rendering himself liable to be proceeded against for having committed a misdemeanor under the 18 & 19 Vict.c. 63, s. 29. As it did not appear on investigation that the Corresponding Secretary had acted from any improper motive, and further that he procured 35 out of 50 of the spurious copies of the District Rules, which were printed to be forwarded to the Registrar, to be destroyed, no further notice was taken of the matter. The fifteen remaining copies were retained by the officers of the Haydon Lodge, M. U., held at the Anchor Inn, Haydon Bridge, who were warned of the consequences of circulating them, as by so doing they would render themselves liable to proceedings under the 29th section.

The officers of Sanctuary Robin Hood and Little John, of the Ancient Order of Shepherds, held at the Queen's Arms Tavern, Burrage-road, Plumstead, by some misunderstanding, issued a code of rules, very different from the certified copy, but upon being informed of this infringement of the law and its consequences, they immediately called in the edition and delivered them to the Registrar to be destroyed, and no further proceedings were taken.

The following is a list arranged according to Counties, of the Friendly Societies which, since the Registrar's last Report, have been dissolved, and the dissolution advertised in the "London Gazette," pursuant to 23 & 24 Vict. c. 58, s. 3. Those marked * were dissolved by the Registrar, and the particulars of his awards will be found at the end of the list.

BERKSHIRE.—Union Club, Rising Sun Inn, Blacknest, Sunninghill. This society was established in 1822, and its rules certified in 1832. In 1856 the society had 129 members, and 900*l.* money; in October last the number of members was reduced to 93, and 600*l.* in cash. An application was made to the Registrar under the 23 & 24 Vict. c. 58, and after an investigation into the assets and liabilities he made his award for a dissolution of the society and division of the funds.

BERKSHIRE.—Friendly Society, School-room, Kintbury. This society was established previous to the year 1838, and in December 1860 consisted of 29 ordinary and 10 honorary members. On the 10th December 1860, the following was sent to the Registrar: "We, the undersigned members of the Kintbury Friendly Society, who are at least five-sixths in value of votes according to the Friendly Societies Acts, of the now existing members of the said society, do dissolve and determine the same by consent at a meeting thereof specially called in that behalf, and we do hereby agree to refer and do refer the appropriation and division of the funds and other property of the said society to the award of the Registrar of Friendly Societies in England."

(Here follow the signatures.)

It appeared to the Registrar that this society was not insolvent; but as that question was not left to his decision he made his award for a division of the money among the honorary and ordinary members, after providing a Government annuity for one of the old members.

DURHAM.—Old Loyal Society, Chester-le-Street. Application was made on 23d May 1861, pursuant to the provisions of 23 & 24 Vict. c. 58, s. 1, to the Registrar, to dissolve the society and divide the funds.

Report.

The memorial to the Registrar stated that the society had been established about a century. That in the year 1827 the stock of the society was exhausted, and it was resolved at a meeting of the members held on the 17th November 1834, that when the society's box should be reduced below 20*l.* the sick allowance should be suspended until at least 60*l.* was collected by the regular contributions, and that the property of the house, hearse, and mourning should not be available to the payments to sick members. That from this period the number of members have gradually decreased, so that at the present time they number only 28, about one-fourth of whom are entitled to sick payments, and nearly all are now upwards of 50 years of age, and some are very old. That in the month of April 1856 the society's box was reduced below 20*l.*, and the sick payments have since then been suspended. That the property of the society consisted of a copyhold messuage and premises let for 14*l.*, but previously for 9*l.* per annum; a hearse and mourning of the estimated value of 20*l.*

That various endeavours have been made to make the property of the society available for its sick members, but from the efforts of six members they have not been successful.

The Registrar was requested to declare the society insolvent, and to order that the property thereof should be sold, and the funds divided amongst the members in such manner as to him might seem meet, or to make such other order as he might deem right.

The Registrar by his award found the society was insolvent, and that it would conduce to the benefit of all parties concerned, that the affairs of the society should be wound up, and that the property of the society should be divided among the members in proportion to the number of years each had contributed to the society.

ESSEX.—Union Society of Tradesmen, at Clavering. This society made application to the Registrar on the 4th of February 1861, under the provisions of the 23 & 24 Vict. c. 58. The Registrar attended at Saffron Walden, and investigated the statement made to him, and made his award that the society was in an insolvent state, the funds being during the last ten years diminished from 407*l.* to 97*l.* 5*s.* 10*d.*; the whole of the members were consenting parties. The society was dissolved and the funds divided among the members according to the number of years each party had subscribed.

ESSEX.—Provident Benefit Society, King's Arms Inn, Crouch-street, Colchester. This society, which was established in the month of June 1809, for the purpose (as stated in the rules) of securing a fund for the support of its members in sickness, infirmity, and old age, for decently burying its members, and their wives, and for rewarding its servants, has, for many years past, been in a gradually declining state, owing, among various reasons, especially to the claims which its capital and ordinary funds for a lengthened period have had to sustain, by reason of the large number of its superannuated members; and although every effort has, from time to time, been made by the committee and the body of members to continue its existence by reducing the allowance to such superannuated members to the lowest amount practicable, and otherwise keeping down the expenditure in every possible manner, yet without any permanent benefit resulting therefrom, and finding that the capital or reserve fund was still very rapidly diminishing, and that no additional members have joined during the past 11 years, and a considerable majority of the members being of opinion that no benefit could be derived by the further continuance of its existence, a general meeting was called in the month of January last, when a full statement of the society's affairs during the past three years was laid before them, which showed an expenditure during that period of upwards of 335 l. beyond its income, and that the capital or reserve fund was reduced to 300 l., and the members to 97, whose average ages exceeded 65 years; whereupon it was resolved by a large majority, that it was desirable the society should be forthwith dissolved, in conformity with the 23 & 24 Vict. c. 58, s. 1, and the necessary requisition addressed to the Registrar of Friendly Societies calling upon him to hold an investigation into its affairs, and if it should be found by him to be in an insolvent condition, and that it would conduce to the interests of all parties concerned that the affairs of the above society should be wound up and brought to a termination, to make an award to that effect, and to direct in what manner the funds and property of the society should be divided and appropriated; such requisition having been signed by Mr. David John Dennis, the president, and 64 of the members (being above five-eighths of the entire body) before its presentation. The Registrar, in accordance with the request therein contained, appointed Friday evening, April 5th, when he held an investigation into its affairs. Mr. Stock attended on behalf of the requisitionists, and explained accounts, prepared under the direction of the committee, showing the present state of the society; and Mr. Philbrick attended on behalf of the trustees of the society, and a section of the members who were desirous of its continuance. After hearing statements on either side, the Registrar stated that, in his opinion, no real benefit could result to the body of members by the continuation of its existence, and decided that it should terminate from that day, and that he would proceed forthwith to allot the balance of the capital or reserve funds among the existing members, now numbering 93, according to the number of years of their respective membership.

HAMPSHIRE.—The Colden Common Benefit Society, Colden Common, near Winchester. In this case, the members, in number 30, by agreement, dated 23 February 1861, dissolved the society, and applied to the Registrar to divide and apportion the funds, amounting to 298 l. 10 s.; for that purpose he attended a meeting of members at Winchester in April, and made his award in pursuance of the Act.

Report.

"The St. Ives Union Friendly Society," held at the dwelling-house of Mr. Ekin Arnsby, Melbourne-place, St. Ives, in the county of Huntingdon.

The rules of the above-mentioned society were certified by the Registrar on the 9th day of April 1855, and the society then consisted of 41 members, of which number, three have since died, and nine left through nonpayment of subscriptions. One new member only has since that time been admitted; and there are now 30 members belonging to the society, six of whom are above 70 years of age, six above 60 years of age, 10 above 50 years of age, seven above 40 years of age, and one above 30 years of age.

At the time the rules were certified, the funds of the society amounted to about 120 l., and they are now under the value of 90 l. Each member of the society now pays 1 s. 6 d. every calendar month as subscription for the following benefits, namely, 8 s. per week in sickness for the first six months, and 4 s. per week for the second six months; 4 l. at the death of a member, and 4 l. at the death of a member's wife. The funds are also subject to the payment of 4 s. per member per annum out of the funds for medical attendance, besides the expenses attending the management of the society, without any extra subscription being paid into the funds by the members.

At a special meeting of the above society, called for that purpose, on the 16th day of January 1861, it was unanimously resolved, that the society should be terminated.

"We, the undersigned, being more than five-eighths of the whole of the present members of the said society, do hereby state, that the funds of the said society are insufficient to meet the claims thereon, upon the grounds hereinbefore particularly mentioned. And we therefore make this application to the Registrar of Friendly Societies in England, for him to wind up the affairs of the said society, and to bring the same to a termination in pursuance of the first section of an Act of Parliament passed in the 23d and 24th years of the reign of Her present Majesty, intituled 'An Act to amend the Act of the 18th and 19th years of Her Majesty relating to Friendly Societies.'

"As witness our hands this 6th day of March, in the year of our Lord 1861." The Registrar gave the notice required by the Act, and attended a meeting of the members at St. Ives, dissolved the society, and divided the money among the members in proportion to the time they had contributed,

NORFOLK.—Friendly Society, Lion Inn, Holt. The following application was made to the Registrar under 21 & 22 Vict. c. 102, s. 8:—

"To John Tidd Pratt, Esq., Registrar of Friendly Societies.

"We, the undersigned, being members of the Holt Lion Inn Friendly Society, No. 637, present at a meeting convened for the purpose after due notice, and forming considerably more than one-fourth part of the members thereof, do hereby request that you will, in accordance with the provisions of the 8th section of the 21 & 22 Vict.

Vict. c. 102, in consequence of the yearly decrease in the funds and property of the said society, owing mainly to the impossibility of obtaining any new members thereof, investigate the state of the funds of the said society, with a view to determine whether it shall continue, or be dissolved, and the funds and property divided.

"And we further request, that if, in your opinion, the said society should be dissolved, that you will, under the provisions of the said section of the said statute, make an award to that effect; and that you will also award in what way the funds and property thereof shall be appropriated and divided. Dated the 4th day of June 1860.

"This society was established in the year 1757. For several years past, the number of members, as well as the funds, had decreased; several of the members were above 70, three of them above 80, and no member appeared to have been admitted during the last 20 years. The Registrar attended a meeting of the members at Holt, and as there appeared no probability of obtaining new members, and the funds were decreasing every quarter, owing to the superannuation payments, he dissolved the society and divided the money."

SURREY.—Tradesman United Friendly Society, Swan Inn, Chertsey. This society, which had been of some standing, applied to the Registrar in June 1861, the number of members being considerably decreased, and then only consisting of 51; no new member had been admitted during the last 10 years, 31 of them having been contributors for 30 years and upwards; the funds consisted of about 365 £. The registrar summoned a meeting of the members at Chertsey which he attended; and as in his opinion the society was insolvent, and that for the interest of all parties it should be dissolved, made his award to that effect, and divided the money among the members. In this instance, as in most others, when a dissolution has taken place, the breaking of the society has arisen from the superannuation or old age pay.

BRECON.—Cambrian Friendly Society, Swan Inn, Brecon. At a meeting of the members of the Cambrian Friendly Society held at the Swan Inn, in the town of Brecon, on Thursday, 3d January 1861. The subject of dissolving the society, and of referring such dissolution to the Registrar of Friendly Societies agreeably to the provisions of the Act 23 & 24 Vict., c. 58, having been taken into consideration after due notice given to all the members,—It was agreed and determined upon by undersigned, being not less in number than five-eighths of the whole body of the said society, that it is desirable to dissolve the said society, in consequence of the funds of the said society having for several years past been wholly insufficient to meet the claims thereon, and of the extreme improbability of any accession to the present small number of members; and it is hereby agreed to refer the dissolution and appropriation, or division of the said society, to the award of the Registrar of Friendly Societies, and that the undersigned shall execute any further agreement or instrument which may be necessary for that purpose.

The society was established in the year 1811. The number of members is limited to 80, but it is now reduced to 64. There has not been been any member admitted for the last three years. There were in January 1861, nine members receiving relief, of whom six are members placed on for life, and the remaining three are casual sick members. The weekly relief to the members for life amounts to 1 l. 10 s. 6 d. The weekly relief to casual members amounts to 1 l. 4 s. 6 d. The decrease in the amount of the funds during the last year amounted to the sum of 51 l. 13 s. 4 d.

Report.

The Registrar attended a meeting of the members at Brecon, when it appeared that eight members were receiving permanent sick relief amounting to 97 l. 6 s. per annum, and that during the last year the payment for casual sick pay was 44 l. 9 s. 3 d. The number of members was 64; no new member had been admitted during the last four years; several of the members were above 70, receiving permanent sick pay, and others nearly that age. The society was dissolved by the Registrar, and the members received a dividend according to the years of membership.

In the APPENDIX will be found the FORMS necessary to be used for dissolving a society.

From the cases of dissolution referred to the Registrar, it appears that the Insolvency of the Societies has arisen from the engagements made for Old Age pay, or Superannuation; such Insolvency would be prevented, if a Friendly Society would confine itself to the payment of Sick pay until the age of 60 or 65; and if the members would secure a Government Annuity to commence when the Sick pay ceases.

The following decision of the Judge of the County Court at Merthyr Tydfil, in February last, it is thought may be useful, as showing the powers of the Judge under 18 & 19 Vict. c. 63, s. 41:—

DECISION of the Judge of the County Court, at Merthyr Tydfil, in Reference to the Dissolution of Benefit Societies.

Thomas Jones v. Thomas Thomas, Landlord of the Vulcan Inn, and Treasurer of the Society, February 1861.

THE plaintiff was a member receiving relief of the Penydarran Firemen's Association,—a Friendly Society duly registered. On the 8th of September 1859 the members of the society, without the assent of the plaintiff, resolved on a dissolution, and, in a somewhat tumultuous manner, induced the defendant, the treasurer of the society, to part with the funds. On the 15th September the money was divided, and each member had a share according to what he had paid, deducting what he had received. The plaintiff had received as a member, by reason of sickness, 22 l. more than he had paid in, or contributed to the society, and the sum of 13 s. 6 d. was appropriated to him on the dissolution, which he received; but, as he stated, received only as sick relief. There were no trustees of the society. The meetings of the society were held at the Vulcan Inn, of which the defendant is the landlord. Rees Williams stated that the men made a great row, and insisted on dividing the money, that the plaintiff objected, and that when the sum appropriated to the plaintiff was received by him, he said, "I will take it, but it is not according to my will;" and that the plaintiff said, "He was not willing to divide or to dissolve the club." The defendant insisted on an indemnity from certain members of the society, and a note of hand, signed by some of the members, was given to him. The money was divided by an order of the committee. The defendant is 50 years of age, and is suffering from an extensive disease of both lungs, and his recovery from this disease is not expected, nor possible.

This present application of the plaintiff for relief against the proceedings dissolving the society is made to me under the 41st section of 18 & 19 Vict. c. 63, which enacts that, "In all Friendly Societies established under the Act, or any of certain repeated Acts, all applications for the removal of any trustee, or for other relief, order or direction, &c., shall be made to the County Court of the district, within which the usual or principal place of business of the society shall be situate. - And such court shall, upon the application of any person interested in the matter, entertain such application, and give such relief, and make such orders and direction, in relation to the matter of such application, as hereinafter mentioned; or as may now be given or made by the Court of Chancery, in respect either of its ordinary, or its special, or statutory jurisdiction; and the decision of such County Court, upon and in relation to such application as aforesaid, shall not be subject to any appeal." These powers are very extensive, and when they are exercised, it is desirable the reasons influencing the judgment of the court should be very clearly made known.

The equitable jurisdiction of the County Court was the subject of argument in the case of Hoey v. Macfarlane (22 Jurist, 785), when an application was made to the Court of Common Pleas for a prohibition enjoining one of the judges of the County Courts from further proceedings in a certain plaint, which concluded thus: "The plaintiffs seek an order of this honourable Court, that the said meetings (alleged to have been irregularly summoned) may be declared void and of no effect; that the defendants may be restrained by the injunction of this honourable court from procuring the certificate of the Registrar of Friendly Societies in England; that the proposed alterations and amendments (of the rules made at such meetings) are according to law, and from putting in force, or acting upon the said alterations and amendments, until the 111th rule has been duly complied with in regard thereto; that the defendants be ordered to repay to the trustees of, and for the use of, the society, all such monies as have been expended by the defendants out of the funds of the said society as aforesaid, and that for this purpose, if necessary, an account may be taken, and that they be restrained from paying out of the funds of the society the monies still owing as aforesaid," &c. This plaint was entered against the committee of management of the society. Mr. Justice Willes said in this case: "With reference to the question whether the County Court has jurisdiction, I come to the conclusion it has. The 41st section of the Friendly Societies Act appears appears to give that jurisdiction in the most general terms. There could be no doubt that this species of relief, by order or injunction, was intended and might be administered by the County Court. It might be a doubt whether the order made (by the Court at Liverpool) is such an order as the Court of Chancery would make, or rather, there is no doubt that it would not make an order in this form, but 'that an injunction should issue,' would be the form of the order there. But the obvious construction to be put upon the language of the statute, as it appears to me, is, that the statute intends to bring about the same result that the Court of Chancery would bring about; but the Legislature does not give exactly the same means of doing it. The 41st section of the Act determines the principles on which the County Court is to proceed, and the 42d section contains matter of detail as to the powers which it is to employ; and I must say, it appears to me, that there are means of enforcing the orders of the court in these matters, as by imprisonment (Viner's Abrid. entit. 'Court,' f. 4), that is, assuming the statutory donation of this power to the court does not carry with it a power of enabling the court to execute the intentions of the Legislature; still the remedy would be carried into effect by means of the parties themselves; the principle being the same as that on which indictments would lie on orders for the payment of money made by justices, when there was no other mode to carry them into effect. As to injunction, it is clearly within the jurisdiction of the Court of Chancery to prohibit and prevent the majority of the society from proceeding (irregularly) to alter the constitution of the society. In the case of Ward v. The Society of Attornies (Collier 370), such an injunction was granted." The plaintiffs in this case before the Court of Common Pleas were members of the society, and the case illustrates the extent of the jurisdiction of this court, and points out the course which may be pursued in a County Court, when irregular proceedings are sought to be pursued, disturbing or interfering with the constitution or existence of any Friendly Society.

The 42d section also of the Act provides, that when the order of the County Court shall be for the payment of money on these applications, the same may be enforced in the same manner as ordinary judgments of the court, but when the court orders some act to be done, not being the payment of money, the judge may order the party to do the act, or, in default of so doing, to pay a certain sum of money.

Now, it should be remembered by those who join Friendly Societies, duly registered, that the provisions of the Acts of Parliament passed for the regulation of such societies are made for the protection, and to secure the safety of, and the correct and honest distribution of, the funds, formed out of or arising from their own contributions. Their associations are, in a certain manner, incorporated societies; that is, instead of being a mere partnership of private persons to sue and be sued, in the names of all the members of the society, the law affords to them the facility, and the economy, and the certainty, of having matters in dispute, affecting their interests or property, as members of such societies, determined in courts of law by suing or being sued in the name of their trustees, or of the treasurer as trustee.

trustee. This is a privilege of the greatest value, inasmuch as it gives security to all the contributors to the funds, in making for them, whether as plaintiffs or defendants, a clear and open way to courts of law, without the struggling, jostling, loss and discomfiture which would assuredly accompany any attempt to appear in such courts as a noisy crowd, imperfectly represented, and even, though numerous, imperfect in number, when the whole number might not duly cite others, or be duly summoned to represent a single and common interest. Without this special assistance many might be defendants, or plaintiffs, and yet, if not all were such, having a united and common interest, the progress of a cause might be stopped. It is not in order to control the contributors to these societies, in doing what they have assented to do with their own money, that the law has interfered. Its interference has been made to enable the members easily to accomplish what they have lawfully combined together legally to accomplish.

The members of these societies have also another special privilege, in order to afford to them security, which, without the aid of the Act regulating their association, they would not have, namely, that in case of the insolvency or bankruptcy of any person having the monies or property of the society, the society is to be paid all sums of money due before any other debts are paid, and before any other claims are satisfied. (Section 23.)

Persons may, if they please, put their money into a common purse for objects which they may regard to be beneficial to one another, but, in that case, they hazard the loss of what they so deposit, without enjoying the powers, exemptions, and facilities for promoting their intentions, which such persons constituted as a society under the Friendly Society's Acts enjoy. When they have formed themselves, however, into a society duly registered under the Act, they are bound to observe the rules they have made for the promotion of their mutual interests, and if they desire to put an end to the society, and to divide the funds, the law has expressed the course which is to be pursued. The course it has marked out for this purpose is just, and simply provides for the fulfilment of mutual engagements, when the division of the funds, or the dissolution of the society, occurs. If the members on such occasions resolve to do what is right, there is no obstacle to hinder them in the attainment of their end.

By the 13th section of 18 & 19 Vict. c. 63, in case of the dissolution of a society, the votes of five-sixths in value of the then existing members are necessary, and also, the consent of all persons, if any, then receiving, or then entitled to receive, any relief, annuity, or other benefit, from the funds thereof, to be testified under their hands individually and respectively, unless they are first duly satisfied, or adequate provision is made for satisfying their claims. Every member, on such occasions, is to be entitled to one vote, and to one additional vote for every five years he shall have been a member, but no member is to have more than five votes. The 23 & 24 Vict. c. 58, provides that members may refer the appropriation or division of the funds, when the dissolution of a society occurs, to the award of the registrar, repealing so much of the former Act as requires the appropriation and division to be set forth in the agreement for dissolution. It also enables enables five-eighths of the members to dissolve the society, if it shall, from insufficiency of funds, be in an insolvent condition. Now, in the case before me, none of the requirements of the Act relating to the dissolution of societies were observed; no consent in writing of the plaintiff was given; and no provision was made for the plaintiff, who at the time was receiving, or entitled to receive, relief. The plaintiff, therefore, is entitled to the same extent of relief as if the society still existed in operation. The defendant is treasurer, and there are no trustees; but the 17th section provides, that where no trustee shall have been appointed, the treasurer of the society, or other person who has the custody of the monies of the society, shall be taken to be a trustee within the meaning of the Act. The defendant, therefore, was the sole trustee when the funds were delivered up by him. He ought to have resisted the importunity and pressure of the demand made on him, and to have insisted on the dissolution being effected, if to be effected at all, in a legal manner. If he felt that doubts prevailed among the members respecting the safety of the funds, he might have agreed on a place of deposit, or on some means for their security until the dissolution should have been legally accomplished; but he had no right, under the circumstances, illegally to hand over the funds for the purpose of distribution, by the direction even of the committee of management. His liability as trustee is not at an end because he has parted with the monies.

The consideration, therefore, before me is, Shall I make an order for the re-establishment and re-constitution of the society, or an order simply making provision for the plaintiff, who was the only dissident, and whose consent in writing was necessary to authorise the dissolution of the society? If there were interests beyond the immediate personal interests of the members who have consented to the division, simply regarding such interests, an order for the re-establishment of the society would be necessary, though most difficult to enforce. But in fact there are none; any future interests would be contingent on the continuance of the periodical payments made by such members. The interest of the plaintiff is a single and separate interest, and it may be regarded separately, for under the 13th section it is provided, "That if any member, in the case of legal dissolution of a society, is dissatisfied with the provision made for him, it shall be lawful for him, or her, to apply to the judge of the County Court for relief, or other order; and the judge may make such order or direction in relation thereto, as he may think the justice of the case may require, as is enacted with regard to the settlement of disputes under the 41st section." This provision for himself the plaintiff would be entitled to, even if the society were legally dissolved, and he is equally entitled to it in equity when a breach of trust has been committed. As there can be no intermission of the illness of the plaintiff, I shall order that the defendant is chargeable on account of the breach of trust for the continuance of the payments to which the plaintiff was entitled out of the funds disposed of. I shall declare, therefore, that the defendant shall continue the payments of 2s. a week to the plaintiff, to which he is entitled under the rules of the society, and, in the event of the death of the plaintiff, that the defendant shall pay 5*l.*, which, according to the same rules, will become payable.

The

The 13th section of the Act enacts, "That in the event of the dissolution or determination of any society, or the division or appropriation of the funds thereof (except in the way provided for by the Act) any trustee or other officer, or person aiding or abetting therein, shall, on conviction thereof by two justices, be committed to the common gaol or house of correction, there to be kept to hard labour for any term, not exceeding three calendar months, as to such justices shall seem meet." No order that I may make can discharge the parties from this liability. If trustees are threatened with violence, it is their duty to seek protection (which they assuredly will effectually obtain) from magistrates, or from the ordinary courts of law; but, if, instead of so doing, they weakly comply with illegal demands, they must remember that their weakness will be no excuse to relieve them from the liabilities of the trust they surrender, nor from the personal penalties or punishments which their compliance may subject them to endure.

COUNTY COURT, Merthyr Tydvil, April 1861.

Thomas Thomas v. William Griffiths, and Ten other Defendants.

MR. JAMES for the plaintiff, and Mr. Forwood for some of the defendants. His Honor said: "This was an action brought by the plaintiff on a promissory note to pay the sum of 60*l.*, the sum of 10*l.* being abandoned in order to give the court jurisdiction. The note was given by the defendants on the dissolution of the Penydarran Firemen's Association, a Friendly Society duly registered. I held, in a former case, that the proceedings taken by the parties to this action were illegal; that the dissolution of the society had been declared in contravention of the terms of the Act of Parliament (18 & 19 Vict. c. 63); and that the plaintiff in that action, who was the only member of the society receiving relief, was in the position to claim an order against the present plaintiff, under the 41st section of the Act. The plaintiff was the treasurer and the only trustee within the terms of the Act, and he was a party to a breach of trust in distributing the funds of the society, and he himself received 5*l.* 14*s.* as his share of the funds. I came to the conclusion on the hearing of the case that I could make an order granting relief to the plaintiff in that action; and as I was of opinion there were almost insuperable difficulties in the reconstitution of the society, I forbore, in consequence, to deal with them; if indeed, I had, which I doubt, authority to deal with them in that action. I directed, however, the continuance of sick relief by the plaintiff in this action, to the plaintiff in the former action, notwithstanding the distribution of the funds. The plaintiff in the former action was in fact alone wronged through the distribution of the funds, he being then entitled to partake, through the necessities of sickness, in the funds provided for in that very event. No dissolution of the society has been legally made, but the funds were divided, and on that occasion a note for 60*l.* was given by the defendants to the present plaintiff in order to indemnify him from loss, in case any demand should be enforced against him in order to make him accountable for the money he parted with for the purpose of that division. The division of the funds, in the manner in which it was made, was illegal, and subjected the persons aiding and abetting in it to three months' imprisonment (18 & 19 Vict. c. 63, s. 13), but the note was given to secure the repayment, not of money the property of the plaintiff, but of money known to be the property of all the members of the society. If the money advanced on the note were repaid, it will not become the property of the plaintiff, but money instantly payable to any trustees whom the members of the society may appoint to be trustees. It so happens that only one member is actually interested in the continuance of the society, and his interest has been protected by an order against the present plaintiff, if such order shall continue to be available against him as a solvent person. It might, however, happen, that such a note might be given by some of a few members, dividing money of a society among themselves, who might be perfectly able to make restitution of the funds, and the note might be held by a person utterly insolvent. If therefore, the money for which the note were given were not recoverable from the parties signing it, a ready means to replace the funds would be lost. The funds might be recoverable from the parties dividing them in another form of proceeding; but I am of opinion they are recoverable under the note. The money was in fact conditionally paid to the parties signing the note, and all who signed it knew the money did not belong to them absolutely, and that their shares in it could only be legally paid to them when the society should be legally dissolved. Then there arises a question which, I think, I am bound to discuss, namely, what is the course the members of the society should pursue? My opinion is, that they should meet together and legally dissolve the society, making provision for the sick member of their body, in whose favour I made an order in the former proceedings. This note can then be cancelled, and any demands for payment under it can be prevented; in fact, the defendants can thus be released from their liabilities. In desiring this to be done, I am asking the members to pursue a course of legality; to do what is right, and to terminate the business of the society in a manner honourable to themselves. So long as there is one member whose claims on the funds are unsettled, no portion of the funds can be honestly enjoyed by them. There has been a breach of trust committed. If there were no dissentient member, and the members who have received the money were seeking to enforce on the treasurer (the only existing trustee) his liability on account of the breach of trust, this rule of a court of equity would be enforced against them; namely, if the cestuique trust, or the person to be benefited by the trust, concurs in a breach of trust, any interest he may be entitled to is the proper fund to resort to in the first instance. If he has obtained any benefit from the breach of trust, the trustee ought to be compensated. (Booth v. Booth, 1 Beav. 130.) So where a widow was an object of the trust, and concurred in a breach of trust, it was held that she was answerable, and that as there were funds set apart for her in the hands of the trustee, the trustee might refuse to part with them until he was indemnified. (Ling v. Colman, 10 Beav. 375.) So here to the extent to which each member received a benefit by the division of the funds, he would, as against the treasurer or trustees of

of the society be subject to a deduction, on the legal division of the funds, to the extent to which he has already received a share, though irregularly placed in his hands. The result, therefore, in this case would be, that if a formal and legal dissolution of the society were made, the members, under the circumstances of this particular case, will simply be called on to provide out of the funds so much as shall secure what is payable to the plaintiff in the former action. In order then to bring about a final settlement of the difficulties in which the members of this society have involved themselves, I should wish to be called on to make an order for the repayment to the present plaintiff nominally, but actually to new trustees of the society (if they shall be appointed), of so much as will meet the claim of the sick member. As judgment must be given on the note for a sum exceeding 20 l., I am by the statute bound to make my order for payment of the money due on the note in such manner as the plaintiff shall request; but I hope I shall not be asked to do otherwise than to order the payment by such instalments as shall before more than even a small part shall become payable, afford time to the members to meet, and to dissolve the society in the manner directed by the Act of Parliament. This course, if adopted, will terminate the proceedings satisfactorily, and will, in fact, be a fulfilment of the legal, and also of the moral engagements of all the members, when they formed the association to promote the objects for which their contributions have accumulated."

INVESTMENTS.

The 18 & 19 Vict. c. 63, ss. 32, 33, prescribe the securities upon which the funds of Friendly Societies may be invested, and the following is the rule usually framed for that purpose:—

So much of the funds of the society as may not be wanted for immediate use, or to meet the usual accruing liabilities shall, with the consent of the committee of management, be invested by the trustees in such of the following ways as the committee shall direct, viz., in a savings' bank or in the public funds, or with the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt, or upon Government or real securities in Great Britain or Ireland, or upon debentures, mortgages, or securities of any company incorporated by charter or Act of Parliament, and paying a dividend or on or upon the security of any county, borough, or other rates authorised to be levied and mortgaged by Act of Parliament, §§ 32, 33.

It is expressly provided that no investments shall be made in the purchase of house or land (save and except as mentioned in s. 16), and not being the purchase of shares in any Joint Stock Company, or other Company with or without charter of incorporation, and not being personal security, &c.

The Registrar has received the "Rapport sur les comptes de l'année 1859," by the Friendly Societies' Commission for the Kingdom of Belgium. It appears that the attention of the Commission has been drawn to the necessity of obtaining National Statistics relating to Friendly Societies.

The Report states "that the essential condition of the prosperity and stability of Friendly Societies consists in the possibility of calculating, with exactness, the amount of contributions to be paid by members to insure the benefits promised to them.

"It is requisite that an equilibrium be established between the receipts and expenditure, not only for some time or some years only, but for the whole duration of the society. So that either it may be perpetuated by the addition of new members, or, failing new accessions, it may be destined to come to an end with the existence of those of whom it is composed.

"Hence is perceived the necessity of scientifically investigating the average duration of human life, and the probabilities of sickness according to age and occupation.

"In England the solution of this problem was entered upon at an early period. The tables which have been recently adopted are entitled to great confidence. Prepared by order of Parliament, under the direction of the Lords of the Treasury they are based upon the Quinquennial Returns made up to 31st December 1850. No expense was spared, because it was wished that nothing might be neglected, in order to place at the disposal of the public the most exact and complete information.

"Nor could the Government remain careless spectators of the ruin of important societies, which, in consequence of exaggerated promises based on false calculations, were compelled to dissolve, leaving thousands of members in distress, and too old to be admitted into other societies.

"Ought not such striking examples influence us to continue the labours we have carried on for the last 10 years?

"It may surprise some that we do not adopt the English tables, but experience has proved that health, like longevity, varies according to nation, occupation, and manner of living.

"Thus while in England the law of sickness during a period of 32 years from the ages of 18 to 50, is 8.12 days per annum for each person; the French returns give 5.69 days. Our average is 6.81 days, but this is not reliable, because it is not as yet based upon a sufficiently large experience."

The Report then refers to the practice of societies dividing their funds among the members as occurring in Belgium:—"One society has considered itself able to divide amongst its members the sum of 1,429 francs. This is an act of improvidence without any benefit to the members, for the money which they receive is considered as if it were found on the road, and is generally spent at a tavern. They waste a valuable resource without reflecting that expenses will increase year by year, whilst the rate of contributions remains the same. It is painful but useful to point out such abuses, which by spreading tend to nothing less than destroying the character of institutions created especially to meet the necessities of the future."

The

The Report states that in Belgium the average days sickness paid for has been for each member 6·81.

Report.

This is, as may be seen at the beginning of this Report, nearly a day less than in England and a day more than in France. Our calculations, which are only hypothetical as yet, have, during the last five years, varied in a very observable manner.

The Report continues, "In a nation like ours, where the constitution guarantees every liberty in its widest sense, and especially the liberty of association, the law ought not to ordain or restrain in this matter ; it can only protect.

"We are aware that the law of the 13th April (a law like the English Friendly Societies' Act) had no other aim, but generally it has not been appreciated as it deserved to be. Instead of gladly receiving as an advantage the guarantee of good faith, regularity, and enlightened instruction as well as promises of assistance and support, which the disinterested intervention of the Government had just offered to Friendly Societies, we have but too often seen this intervention awaken apprehension and rejected with mistrust.

"That there is a prejudice it is impossible to deny, but by no means need we despair of overcoming it. In England, the model nation of practical liberty, this prejudice does not prevail. The number of Friendly Societies who demand registration, that is to say, the legal recognition which brings them under the protection and control of Government, has continually increased for the last half century. This arises from two causes ; first, the long and bitter experience in England of the evils which inevitably arise in Provident Societies by leaving matters alone without any supervision of public authority. Secondly, the more perfect full conception of the true mission of Government which long experience of a constitutional regime gives to a nation. On the one hand the intervention of the State to remedy the evils of anarchy, which liberty, left to itself, had caused to arise, is received with gladness. On the other hand, far from having to struggle against stupid mistrust or ancient prejudice, the Government found men's minds prepared to invoke its patronage and support.

"We have not, in Belgium, had to endure this bitter experience which has rallied round the State the greater number of Provident Societies of Great Britain. Furthermore, our labouring classes have cherished, doubtless from the period of foreign dominion, a restless love of liberty. There has long been among them, it must be confessed, a tendency to suspect the intervention of authority, which they were inclined to consider rather as an encroachment than as a protection ; as a restriction more than a safeguard of their rights. They do not as yet sufficiently comprehend, as they do in England, that there is community of interest and not antagonism between them and the Government which has charge of watching over their interests. They do not consider that the intervention of the State comes to this, that the State gives them security and requires them to give up nothing."

INDUSTRIAL AND PROVIDENT SOCIETIES.

In a late number of the "Justice of the Peace," published 13 July 1861, it is stated that—

It is now rather more than eleven years since a Select Committee of the House of Commons was appointed for considering and suggesting the means of removing obstacles and giving facilities to safe investments for the savings of the middle and working classes. Amongst other matters which occupied the attention of the Committee, the law of partnership took a prominent position. They reported their opinion that the difficulties which affected that law operated with increased severity in proportion to the smallness of the sum subscribed and the number of persons included in the association; and that any measure for the removal of those difficulties would be peculiarly acceptable to the middle and working classes, and would tend to satisfy them that they are not excluded from fair competition by laws throwing obstacles in the way of men with small capital. This report, like many others, led to no immediate result beyond satisfying the public and the legislature of the expediency of altering the law. In the course of time, however, it produced its effect, and two years afterwards Mr. Slaney introduced his Bill for legalizing the formation of industrial and provident societies. The Bill subsequently became a part of the law, under the title of the "Industrial and Provident Societies Act, 1852" (15 & 16 Vict. c. 31). The importance of the measure is attested by the fact that it has already been amended by two other acts (17 & 18 Vict. c. 25, and 19 & 20 Vict. c. 40), and that a bill is now before Parliament for consolidating and amending the whole law on the subject. It may, therefore, be reasonably supposed that the expectations of the Committee have not been disappointed, and that the working classes have not been slow to avail themselves of the facilities afforded by an alteration which was made for their own peculiar benefit.

The immediate object of the Act of 1852 was to enable persons to apply the provisions of the Friendly Societies Acts to societies for carrying on trades, with such exceptions as were rendered necessary by the difference between the purposes of such societies and those of an ordinary benefit society. It authorised any number of persons to establish a society for the purpose of raising by voluntary subscriptions of its members a fund for attaining any purpose or object for the time being authorised by the laws in force with respect to Friendly Societies or by that Act, by carrying on or exercising in common any labour, trade, or handicraft, or several labours, trades, or handicrafts, except the working of mines, minerals, or quarries beyond the limits of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, and also except the business of banking, whether in the said United Kingdom or elsewhere. And it laid down a code of rules for the regulation of such societies, which are set forth in the Act. The laws relating to Friendly Societies were declared to be applicable to societies formed under the Act, except as they were thereby expressly varied, or were certified by the Registrar of Friendly Societies to be inapplicable, and these societies were also excepted out of the operation of the Joint Stock Companies Registration Act (7 & 8 Vict. c. 110). It was, however, expressly declared that the liability of the members for the debts and engagements of such societies should not be in anywise restricted, with this exception, that after the expiration of two years from the time of ceasing to be members, that liability should cease.

Since the passing of this Act, however, an important alteration has been made in the general law of partnership by the introduction of the principle of limited liability, and it has consequently become necessary to amend the Act in order to place societies of this description on a footing of equality with the ordinary Joint Stock Companies. This is one of the objects contemplated by the Bill introduced by Mr. Slaney on the 25th ultimo. With that view the 13th clause enacts that the rules of any such society may provide that the liability of the member shall be limited to the subscriptions payable upon the shares held by him, and it further enacts that the society shall give the same notice of the limitation of liability as is required in the case of an ordinary Joint Stock Company.

One of the most important changes, however, proposed by the Bill is that which relates to the transference of shares. The present Act expressly declares that the interest of any member in any such society shall not be transferable, but the whole amount of the balance due to any member shall be paid to him on withdrawal from the same according to the rules of the society. The bill, however, expressly enables such societies to make their shares transferable, subject, however, to this condition, that any member who transfers his shares shall continue liable for one year, and any member who withdraws from the society shall continue liable for two years, and it lays down certain rules to be observed by those societies which avail themselves of that provision. This alteration, if it should be carried out, can hardly fail of producing important consequences, for nothing can operate as a greater check to such societies than the present inconvertibility of their shares. Other facilities are also given to such societies. Their rules may authorise the trustees to hold not exceeding five acres of land, and to erect thereon any buildings required for the purposes of the society. The trustees, too, may be authorised to rent any land or building required for the purposes of the society, and to invest any part of the funds of the society in the stock or shares of any other company or society incorporated by Act of Parliament or registered under this Act, wherein the liability of the shareholders is limited. But no society is to be entitled to the benefit of this Act whereof the rules shall not provide that the amount of the share or interest in the funds of the same held at any one time by or in trust for any one member shall be restricted to a sum which shall not exceed the amount allowed to be secured by any society registered under the Friendly Societies Act, whether by way of annuity, or otherwise. The provisions of the Friendly Societies Acts giving such societies priority over other creditors as to the estate of officers, and exemption from stamp duties in certain cases, are not to apply to societies constituted under the Act; and provision is made for the case of members becoming bankrupt or insolvent. And lastly, power is given to such societies to transfer themselves into companies with limited liability under the Joint Stock Companies Acts; and any society registered under the Act of 1852, which shall desire to avail itself of the provisions of this Act or any of them, may alter its rules in such manner as shall be necessary for that purpose.

Report.

There are some other provisions in the bill, which we have not space to specify. But enough has been stated to show that the bill, if it passes, will produce an important, and it may be hoped a beneficial, effect in fostering the enterprise of the middle and working classes, and consequently that it is entitled to the favourable consideration of all who wish well to those important members of the community.

When Mr. Slaney's Bill is brought in next Session, it would appear to be very desirable to refer it to a Select Committee, before whom the several provisions might be carefully considered.

Since the passing of the 15 & 16 Vict. c. 31, to the 16th May 1861, the Registrar has certified the rules of 427 Industrial and Provident Societies. Several of them, however, have been dissolved; and one of them, called the "National Industrial and Provident Society," the rules of which were certified in March 1860, which had not less than 20 different branches, has been lately dissolved, and in the last month an application was made to the Master of the Rolls for an Order under the Winding-up Act. The following is a report of the case:—

MASTER of the ROLLS. 15 July 1861.

In re National, Industrial, and Provident Society.
(9, Weekly Reporter, 774.)

A Society certified under the Industrial and Provident Societies Acts, held to be within the provisions of the Joint Stock Companies Winding-up Acts, and an order for winding up such society was made accordingly.

THE above-named society was formed in March 1860, under the Industrial and Provident Societies Act, 1852, with the object of raising, by voluntary subscriptions of the members, a fund for better enabling them to purchase food, &c., by carrying on in common the trade of general dealers. Rules for its regulation were duly certified by Mr. Tidd Pratt to be in conformity to law, and the provisions of the Statutes relating to industrial and provident societies.

The society having become embarrassed, the present petition was presented by two of the contributors and creditors, and prayed that the society might be wound up under the provisions of the Joint Stock Companies Winding-up Acts of 1848, 1849, and 1857. The petition was entitled in the last-mentioned Acts, and also in the Industrial and Provident Societies Act, 1852, and the Acts amending the same, and in the above-mentioned matter. The society had no public officer, but two of the trustees were served with the petition, and an undertaking to appear on the petition was given on behalf of the third trustee and the secretary.

T. A. Roberts

T. A. Roberts now asked for an order in the terms of the prayer of the petition. He referred to In re the St. George's Benefit Building Society, 5 W. R. 771, where in another branch of the court a benefit building society was held to be within the provision of the Joint Stock Companies Winding-up Acts.

A. E. Miller appeared for the trustees of the society, and consented to the application, stating that it would be beneficial to the society.

C. J. Shebbeare, amicus curiæ, observed that similar orders had been made in other branches of the court.

The Master of the Rolls said, that although prima facie, he should have thought that friendly societies were not within the provisions of the Winding-up Acts, yet upon the authority of the cases mentioned he would make the order.

The Master of the Rolls, at Chambers.—In the matter of the Joint Stock Companies Winding-up Act, 1848, and the Joint Stock Companies Winding-up Amendment Acts, 1849 and 1857, and of the Industrial and Provident Societies Act, 1852, and the Acts amending the same, and of the National Industrial and Provident Society,—The Master of the Rolls, the Judge of the High Court of Chancery, to whose court this matter is attached, has this day appointed Robert Palmer Harding, of No. 3, Bank Buildings, in the City of London, and No. 5, Serle-street, Lincoln's-inn, in the county of Middlesex, accountant, official manager of this company. Dated this 15th day of July 1861.

Geo. Whiting, Chief Clerk.

Michael Abrahams, 17, Gresham-street,
London, Solicitor.

The failure of these societies appears to be the want of capital to carry on the business, and the system of buying and selling on credit; in some instances, through mismanagement or fraud; and it is feared that the proceeding under the Winding-up Act will be attended with great loss, if not ruin, to several of the members, who are generally those of the working classes.

The following is copied from a paper published in Lancashire:—

We extract the following paragraphs from an article on "The Working Classes, past and present," which has recently been communicated to the Manchester Guardian, under the signature of "T. H. W.," leaving our readers to form their own conclusions upon the merits of the argument:—

Report.

"Latterly, a new idea has got into the heads of great numbers, namely, that of combining together and clubbing their money, not to keep hands from work, but to set them on work; not to lessen, but to increase the production of wealth. A positive rage has arisen for joint-stock stores, weaving sheds, and spinning mills, on the principle of limited liability. Not long since, the respectable landlady of that well-known little inn, 'The Old Queen Anne,' at Heywood, said to my traveller, 'The men are giving over drinking, and are pinching their wives too, to put their money into the joint-stock down yonder;' and I hear similar accounts from many quarters; while factories, on this principle, involving outlays of ten, twenty, fifty, and even seventy thousand pounds, are some of them at work, others in process of erection, and others again in the hands of projectors.

"So, then, the working class, after a protracted servitude in worse than Egyptian bondage, and a long sojourn in the dreary wilderness of wages, are beginning to enter the land of promise! I more than doubt this; I cannot help applying to this movement the old adage, 'the more haste the least speed.' It is, in the main, a rush of inconsiderate people. How many, I wonder, have weighed the great and peculiar dangers which beset some classes of joint-stock undertakings? I will instance the principal dangers. Spinning and manufacturing are subject to times of no profit, and even of actual loss. Under such circumstances, it is to be feared that, in various ways, a multitude of partners may interfere most mischievously with the management. To keep such a constituency quiet, directors will be under sore temptation to declare profits out of capital. Again, such undertakings are especially liable to careless, reckless, or dishonest management in good as well as bad times. It is a trite remark, that a divided responsibility is little felt; and I am quite sure, from an inspection of balance sheets, that, in more than one of these mills, profits have been divided without any provision towards discharging heavy mortgages,—nay, without any deduction, or any adequate deduction, for the renewal of machinery. Clearly, such institutions are born in a galloping consumption, with inevitable death at no great distance.

"A recent brief period of exceptionally high profits in spinning and weaving has been the cause of the furor for these enterprises. But factories have increased too fast, and the proprietors are already working under loss,—or, at best, without profit; nor are their prospects for the current year calculated to excite any feelings but those of uneasiness. The co-operative companies will be severely tried. It may require a few years to test them, but I fear the issue. Should one's apprehensions be realised, the co-operative principle itself will be discredited; and, worse than that, the very disposition to save will be discouraged, and a reaction to improvidence will set in.

"On the other hand, it is to be considered that every worker (being also a shareholder) becomes a virtual overlooker of the operative non-shareholders, and a very vigilant one too. A friend of mine, a country mill-owner, tells me, that in a factory in his neighbourhood, a sharp young woman was heard saying angrily to a great lout of a fellow—"I'll tell thee what, Jim, this consarn's part moine; an' if thee doesn't keep them ends up, I'll get thee bagg'd (dismissed), theaw lazy lazy dirty pouse." I may here remark, by the way, that these master and mistress operatives are by no means advocates for the paying of higher wages than the supply of labour renders necessary; nor are they ever known to approve of strikes, or of subscriptions to unions amongst their own non-shareholding workpeople.

"I must reiterate my persuasion that this startling movement among our operatives, is a temporary access of that ruinous speculative mania which periodically seizes on the commercial class. It is not prudence, for prudence is a quiet, thoughtful, and cautious pursuit of our interests on the whole; and implies, therefore, a regulation of the love of gain itself. No! The feeling at work is the inflamed lust of money, which is quite as demoralising as the thirst for gin. I have it on the best authority, that in Bury, many infatuated fathers are not only cruelly pinching their families, but actually withdrawing their children from school, in order to save their pence for investment in these ill-considered enterprises. Most respectfully would I ask thoughtful men, such as Dr. Watts and Mr. Abel Heywood, if it is wise in them to use their great influence in promoting so rapid a multiplication of these schemes? I cannot but doubt whether, three or four years hence, they will look back complacently on what they are now doing with entire singleness of purpose.

"The co-operative principle is, in my judgment, a sound one, and it will slowly work its way to success; but, in order to this, a far higher intelligence and power of self-government must be generally possessed than is the case at present. It will require generations of apprenticeship to prepare the mass of our operatives for the predicted millennium of master-workers. Meantime, their progress will be safer, and therefore, really quicker, if, while now and then cautiously trying a combined enterprise, they place their savings in penny banks, post-office banks, and savings banks, with the purpose of going into business, if at all, in the old way.

"To have a growing fund out at interest, simply as a store for a 'rainy day,' is safest and best in the present state of intelligence, and with our experience of the co-operative principle; and there is a collateral effect of such hoarding that ought to weigh much in its favour, but which is not generally perceived. The deposits in the banks above referred to are invested in Government securities. Of course, they keep an equal amount of other people's funds out of such securities. Those other people's funds must, therefore, be lent by the hands of regular bankers and discounters to agriculturists, miners, manufacturers, shipowners, merchants, and other active agents in the industry of the country. And thus, indirectly, would the savings of the poor feed the general labour fund. Let them lay by an additional five millions of pounds a year, and the nation's capital would be so much larger, the demand for labour would be increased, and wages would be kept at a higher level. Besides (and this is something, and something noble too) every holder of a banking-book, would himself be a capitalist, a stakeholder with the wealthiest in that vast scheme of production which is the main source of his country's greatness."

In the APPENDIX will be found a Form of Rules for the establishment of these Societies; and further information respecting them will be found in a publication called "The Co-Operator," and in a pamphlet by Mr. Watts, published at Manchester, on "Co-operative Societies, Production, and Distribution, Past, Present, and Future."

LOAN SOCIETIES are established under 3 & 4 Vict. c. 110; the funds are subscribed by the founders of the Society, or borrowed upon debentures, and lent out in sums not exceeding 15 l. The money must be repaid, and interest charged, according to one of the Schemes in the schedule to the Act. The money is advanced on the borrower and his sureties executing a note in the form prescribed by the Act. The scheme usually adopted is one which requires a payment of 1 s. in the pound for interest, and the repayment of the principal at the rate of 6 d. per week per pound, the first payment to be made on the 21st day after the loan is advanced, and a sum of not more than 1 s. 6 d. is allowed to be charged for making inquiries as to the solvency of the borrower and his sureties, and for a copy of the rules, pass book and all other business connected with the loan.

In his last Report, the Registrar referred to a Bill brought into Parliament in the year 1807, "For Investing the Funds of the Poor," which contained Provisions for the Regulation of the Poor Fund, for remitting and withdrawing the money through the post-office, and he suggested, that by some legislative provisions similar to those contained in that Bill, facility might be given to the industrious classes to deposit their savings through the different money order offices, by which greater facility would be given to depositors, as well as the security of the State for the amount deposited.

On the 17th May 1861, the Act 24 Vict. c. 14, was passed, intituled, "An Act to grant additional facilities for depositing "small savings at interest, with the security of the Government for the due repayment thereof." This Act &c. will be found at length in the APPENDIX.

By this Act, the Postmaster General, with the consent of the Treasury, is to frame Rules and Regulations, and may authorise the officers in post-offices to receive deposits, and the depositor has a legal claim on the Postmaster General for the sum so deposited; the money may be withdrawn at any post-office where money orders are paid, so that a person depositing money in London, may withdraw the same at Liverpool, and so vice versa; and payment will not be made later than 10 days at farthest; in all probability, not more than three or four days will be required. The time of payment will not vary according to the amount demanded, and therefore will generally, no doubt, be made in a shorter time than is now required by most Savings Banks. The officers of the Postmaster General are forbidden to disclose the name of any depositor, or the amount deposited or withdrawn; if, at any time, the funds are insufficient to pay the depositors, the Treasury are to make good such deficiency out of the Consolidated Fund. No deposits to be of less amount than 1s., nor of any sum not a multiple thereof. The rate of interest payable to depositors, is 2l. 10s. per cent. per annum, calculated on a pound, or some multiple thereof, to commence on the first day of the calendar month next following the day of deposit, and cease on the first day of the calendar month in which the deposit is withdrawn. Though the amount of interest is a trifle less than is given by most savings banks, it should be remembered that a depositor will, when that system is fully carried out, have a savings bank brought to his own door, that he will be able to deposit his money on any day in the week except Sunday, from 10 to 4 o'clock, and on a Saturday to a later hour; that there will be perfect secrecy as to his investments and withdrawals, and that more than all, he will have the security of the Government for any deposits he may make, with power to draw out the same at any place he pleases, the difference of interest, viz., eight or ten shillings per annum at the most on one hundred pounds, will not be an object, particularly when it is seen from the last annual return, that 227,593 depositors had only on the average 6*s.* each, none of them exceeding 1*l.*; 312,584, whose average was 2*l.* 10*s.* 5*d.*, no one exceeding 5*l.*; 202,393, whose average was 6*l.* 19*s.* 7*d.*, no one exceeding 10*l.*; so that out of 1,557,149 depositors, there were 742,570 whose amounts did not exceed 10*l.* each. The amount of investments is regulated by the Acts relating to savings banks. Transfers of deposits may be made from the post-office savings bank to any savings bank legally established, as well as from any legally established savings bank to the post-office savings bank; and the provisions of the Acts now in force, relating to savings banks, which are not repugnant to the provisions of the 24 Vict. c. 14, are made applicable thereto. To enable a Friendly Society to invest its funds in a post-office savings bank, a copy of the rules of such Society, with the names and addresses of the Trustees, must be sent by post to the Postmaster General, and they will be furnished with full instructions and directions to enable them to make such investment.

The Report of the operations of the savings banks in FRANCE for the year 1860, lately presented to the French Government, affords some very interesting particulars concerning not only the Banks in FRANCE, but also those of several other countries. The following is extracted from the Report, which bears the title of "Rapports et Comptes Rendus des Operations de la Caisse d'épargne de Paris pendant l'année 1860, présentés à l'assemblée générale des Directeurs et Administrateurs, le 27 Juin 1861."

At the end of 1859, the numbers of savings banks in FRANCE was 433. The number of accounts was 1,121,465. The amount deposited was 13,318,280*l.* The average amount of deposit is 11*l.* 17*s.* 6*d.*

John Tidd Pratt,

The Registrar of Friendly Societies in England.

London, 24 July 1861.

APPENDIX.

INSTRUCTIONS for the Establishment of FRIENDLY SOCIETIES on Sound Principles; by John Tidd Pratt, Esq., the Registrar of Friendly Societies in England.

THE object of the following INSTRUCTIONS is to promote the general welfare of the WORKING CLASSES, by enabling them to establish, upon sound principles, FRIENDLY SOCIETIES, to provide against the natural evils and exigencies of SICKNESS, OLD AGE, and DEATH, and to act on those principles of mutual assurance and support which are now so generally adopted by the more opulent members of society, and to guard them against the many plausible but ruinous schemes by which they are too often deceived.

In a Society founded on the following Tables, it is as certain as it is possible to be, that the benefits subscribed for by the members will be received by them. The SICKNESS Tables cease at sixty, sixty-five, or seventy years of age, up to which period the DATA upon which they are founded are well tested. The ANNUITIES, or OLD AGE PAY, commencing at sixty, sixty-five, or seventy, will be guaranteed by the Government, and the sums payable at DEATH, by an Insurance company of long standing, or by contributions according to the Tables. No further certainty in these respects is attainable.

Every member should be at liberty to subscribe to one or all of the objects, according to his ability or inclination, with the exception, that persons insuring against SICKNESS, must also insure for MEDICAL ATTENDANCE as long as they reside within the limits of the Society; and FEMALES, as well as MALES, may be members for any of the benefits, except relief in sickness.

All money received for SICK PAY, ENDOWMENTS, DEATH, and EXPENSES of MANAGEMENT, should be invested in a savings bank, on Government security, or on the securities authorised by the Friendly Society Act.

The management of the Society should be vested in a committee consisting of HONORARY and BENEFIT members, or of BENEFIT members only; and there should be Trustees, a Treasurer, Visitors, Secretary, and Auditors. The only paid officers should be the Secretary and Auditors.

The accounts should be kept so as to show the Contributions paid to and Benefits paid out of the fund subscribed for each particular insurance, as well as for Expenses of Management.

The Society should be self-supporting, for which purpose each member should be required to pay a small sum per month for the expenses of management, and the place of meeting should, if possible, be at some public institution or school-room. If that cannot be obtained, and there is no other place except an inn or a public house, a certain fixed payment should be made for the use of the room, lights, and fire, with a stipulation that no beer, &c., should be brought into the room until all business is concluded, when each member should pay for any refreshment he may require. When an ANNIVERSARY or ANNUAL FEAST is held, the contribution thereto, and attendance thereat, should be voluntary, though there seems no objection to a rule, that every member, who lives within a given distance, should have a ticket sent him, which, if not returned at a certain time, say a week before the day of the feast, he should be required to pay for.

In a society formed on these principles every Member will have to pay only such contributions as may be required by the rules and tables for the benefits he wishes to receive, and there will be no compulsory charges for beer, feasts, useless paraphernalia, or other extras.

The BENEFITS assured to MALE MEMBERS, as provided in the rules and tables, should be:

1st. MEDICAL ATTENDANCE.

2d. WEEKLY ALLOWANCE IN SICKNESS UNTIL SIXTY, SIXTY-FIVE, or SEVENTY.

3d. ENDOWMENTS of sums from 10 l. to 200 l., payable in five years and upwards for CHILDREN, or persons of any age.

4th. The society should act as the agents of the Government in securing IMMEDIATE ANNUITIES or DEFERRED ANNUITIES, from 1 l. to 30 l. per annum, commencing at 60, 65, or 70, under the conditions hereafter mentioned.

5th. The society should act as the agents of some old-established LIFE ASSURANCE office, or receive contributions according to the tables, for securing sums payable at death from 20 l. to 200 l.

6th. A small monthly payment must be made to defray the necessary expenses of management.

Care should be taken to admit as members, insuring against sickness, such persons only as are of good health and good moral character.

No entrance fees should be required, nor should any fines be incurred for non-attendance, or not serving office, except that of visitor.

The TABLES have been approved by experienced actuaries, and the premiums required are the lowest compatible with safety to the insured. Each member will pay according to his age at the time of admission, and will, therefore, bear his own burden, so that the young will not have to pay for the increased risk of the aged.

The accounts should be kept in such a way, as to enable the annual statement to be made out in the manner directed by the Registrar, pursuant to 18 & 19 Vict. c. 63, and should be audited quarterly by persons not members of the society.

MEDICAL ATTENDANCE.

The contribution for medical attendance, as agreed with the medical practitioner (which varies from 3 s. to 5 s. per annum), should be paid when the member is admitted, quarterly in advance. This benefit is claimable from the time of admission.

SICKNESS

SICKNESS BENEFIT.

Appendix.

Every industrious and provident person should, immediately he begins to seek a livelihood, insure against sickness.

Savings banks afford no provision against sickness; for suppose a man to have saved 1 s. per week for one year, and then to be assailed by accident or ill health, he will, at the rate of 10 s. per week, consume his savings in little more than a month.

On the other hand, a member entering a society between the ages of 16 and 23, may, by a payment of 1 s. per month only, secure to himself an allowance in sickness of 10 s. per week, according to the rules and tables.

The society's allowances in sickness are assured, subject to its rules and tables. Allowances of 10 s., 15 s., or 20 s. per week are provided, the rates of payment for which are equitably adjusted, according to the age of each member on admission; and the period to which the benefits are insured for, until 60, 65, or 70 years of age, but should in no case exceed two-thirds of what he can earn in good health, and no member should be allowed to belong at the same time to another society for the same benefits.

Male members can only be admitted to insure in this fund between the ages of 16 and 40. Members free 12 months after admission. Every member insuring for sick pay must also insure for medical attendance.

The payments in case of sickness to be made in full for twenty-six successive weeks; half the amount for the next twenty-six weeks; and if the sickness shall continue, the member shall be reduced to quarter pay; and when any member has had full pay for a less period than twenty-six weeks, or half pay for a less period than twenty-six weeks, he shall not be allowed to begin his full or half pay over again on the renewal of sickness, until he shall have ceased to receive any pay whatever on account of sickness for six calendar months, and returned to his usual employment, or some other by which he shall gain a livelihood, but if he fall ill within that time, he shall be placed in the same situation as when he ceased to receive any relief, and shall receive such relief, and no other, as he would have received had no cessation of his sickness occurred.

ENDOWMENTS.

Endowments of not less than 10*l.*, or more than 200*l.*, may be assured by members for themselves or for their nominees at any time according to the Tables.

If any member, having assured an endowment for himself, shall die before the payments have been completed, then the money received by the society shall be paid to the party nominated by the member according to the rule below, or if no nomination has been made, it shall be divided among his relatives according to the statute of distributions.

If a member assuring an endowment for himself, cannot continue his payments, he shall give notice thereof to the secretary, and the committee shall thereupon take such measures for the repayment as they may think the case requires.

If any member, having assured an endowment for a nominee, shall die before the payments have been completed, and notice thereof has been given to the society, within six months of the death, together with a declaration in writing, stating that no person is willing to continue the monthly contribution, then the money received by the society shall, at the discretion of the committee, be paid to some relative for the benefit of the nominee, or retained, until the period has elapsed, at which the payments were to be completed, and then it shall be paid to the nominee, or should the nominee die in the interval, it shall then be paid to the person or persons appearing to the trustees to be entitled to the effects of the deceased nominee.

If the nominee on whose behalf an endowment has been contracted for by any member shall die before the requisite payments have been completed, then the money received by the society shall be paid to the person or persons appearing to the trustees to be entitled to the effects of the deceased nominee.

The secretary shall keep a book, in which a member may nominate in writing the person to whom the money paid for an endowment for himself shall be paid on his decease, such person being the husband, wife, father, mother, child, brother, or sister, nephew, or niece of such member

member (18 & 19 Vict. c. 63, s. 31). Any member may revoke such nomination by a written notice to that effect, signed by himself; and it shall be the duty of the secretary to see the nomination erased. The member to pay 3*d.* to the Management Fund for each nomination or revocation.

Appendix.

By a MONTHLY PAYMENT of the Sums under-mentioned 10*l.*, 20*l.*, or any multiple not exceeding 200*l.* may be secured on the conditions before stated, at the end of

ANNUITIES.

Annuities, immediate or deferred, not exceeding 30 l. per annum, may be contracted for and have the security of the Government, the society merely acting as agents.—For the Tables see p. 60, 61.

In the case of Deferred Annuities, they may be secured, on the condition of the whole of the money paid being returned, if the member die before the annuity commences, or if he is unable or decline to continue his payments; or they may be purchased at a cheaper rate by payments in one sum, or by an annual payment, if the money is not returnable in either of these events.

EXAMPLE.—A male, aged 25, wishing to purchase an annuity of 1*l.* per month, payable on his attaining the age of 60, will have to pay the sum of 1*l.* 19*s.* per annum; if of the age of 30, for the same annuity he must pay 2*l.* 9*s.* per annum. In both these cases, if he were to die before he attained the age at which the annuity would commence, or if he were at any time unable, or declined to continue his payments, all the money he may have paid will be returned by the Government.

If, however, he wishes to purchase these annuities, without a return of money, he will have to pay for the first annuity the sum of 1*l.* 6*s.* per annum, and for the second the sum of 1*l.* 14*s.* per annum.

The payments required for females are a little higher.

The payments to be made monthly to the society, and paid by the trustees to the Government.

On the death of an annuitant in receipt of an annuity, one fourth part of such yearly annuity is payable to the representatives.

Information respecting immediate annuities and payments at other ages, and for other annuities not exceeding 30 l. per annum, may be obtained at the society's office.

Appendix.

For the regulations as to the purchase of ANNUITIES see below, and for the CONTRIBUTIONS, &c. see Table No. I., p. 60.

SUMS PAYABLE AT DEATH.

Money payable at DEATH, from 20*l.* to 200*l.*, may be contracted for by quarterly, half-yearly, or annual payments. These sums should be secured by the policies of some approved Assurance Company, and delivered to each member, or by the society on payment of the monthly contributions according to the tables. The policies will be in force as soon as three months' contributions are paid.

For the terms and conditions of LIFE ASSURANCE, see p. 62.

EXPENSES OF MANAGEMENT OF THE SOCIETY.

A payment of 6*d.* per quarter in advance is required from each member.

ACCOUNTS.

A separate book, a clear and distinct debtor and creditor account, and a separate fund should be kept for each benefit. The books, receipts, investments, and accounts of every kind, ought to be thoroughly examined by some competent disinterested person once a quarter. Instructions in BOOK-KEEPING for FRIENDLY SOCIETIES may be had on application to the REGISTRAR.

REGULATIONS RELATING TO THE PURCHASE OF ANNUITIES.

Government annuities not exceeding 30*l.* per annum may be contracted for through this society, the annual premiums for which may be paid by monthly or quarterly payments. The following are the conditions on which these annuities may be obtained, and extracts are given from the Government tables. Every information respecting the payments at other ages, together with the necessary forms of certificate of both, &c., may be obtained from the Secretary of the Society.

The Act 16 & 17 Vict. c. 45, empowers the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt to grant annuities to an amount not exceeding 30*l.* per annum to any one person, viz. :—

- 1st. Immediate annuities depending on single lives.
- 2d. Deferred annuities depending on single lives.

The extract from Table No. I., p. 60, shows the money to be paid down in one sum at the time of purchase for an immediate life annuity, depending upon a single life. No purchase can be made in this class for a less sum than 4*l.* a year.

The extract from Table No. II., p. 61, shows the yearly sum which will purchase a deferred life annuity, depending upon a single life. The purchase money returnable, and the smallest annuity which can be purchased, is 4*l.* a year.

If the purchaser of a Deferred Annuity, where the purchase money is returnable, shall die before the annuity becomes due, the money actually paid will be returned to his representative. If during his life he desire to be repaid the sum paid by him, such repayment will be made, if the annuity itself has not become payable.

The

The extract from Table No. III., p. 26, shows the yearly sum which will purchase a deferred life annuity depending upon a single life. The purchase money NOT RETURNABLE. In this case an annuity may be purchased for not less than 4 l.

In addition to the foregoing classes of Annuities, the Commissioners are empowered to grant immediate annuities depending upon joint lives, with benefit of survivorship. These tables are too voluminous to be published. Every information will be given, however, to parties who may desire to purchase such annuities, on application to the National Debt Office.

No person can legally purchase or hold a larger annuity than 30 l. a year; but purchasers may commence, and gradually increase their annuities, by the purchase of any sum not less than 1 l. a year, up to 30 l. a year.

A husband and wife may each hold any of these annuities.

Annuities granted through this society will be payable at the National Debt Office, 19, Old Jewry, London. If an annuitant change his place of residence, he may receive the annuity at the nearest Savings Bank, parochial or friendly society, at his own election, or at the National Debt Office.

All annuities, when due, will be payable by two equal half-yearly payments; thus:—

If the annuity be purchased, and the money required for the same shall be actually paid in to the account of the Commissioners at the Bank of England or Bank of Ireland, after the 5th day of January and before the 5th day of April	}	Such annuity will be payable the 5th of July and the 5th of January in every year.
If after the 5th day of April and before the 5th day of July -	}	Such annuity will be payable the 10th of October and the 5th of April in every year.
If after the 5th day of July and before the 10th day of October	}	Such annuity will be payable the 5th of January and the 5th of July in every year.
If after the 10th day of October and before the 5th day of January - - - -	}	Such annuity will be payable the 5th of April and the 10th of October in every year.

Upon the death of the person during whose life the annuity was payable, a sum equal to ONE FOURTH PART of the annuity, over and above all half-yearly arrears thereof respectively, will be paid to the person entitled to claim such payment; but the fourth part will not be paid unless claimed within two years after the death of such person.

These annuities are not subject to the income tax. They cannot be sold by the Annuitant.

If any one individual shall be possessed at any one time of any of these Annuities exceeding in the whole the sum of 30 l., the same will be forfeited.

Note.—It is not practicable at this date to render an account of the amount of revenue “actually received in the financial year 1860–61,” as all the returns from the local officers to the 31st March last, have not yet been received at this office, and examined.

The time of payment of the malt duty was also changed in 1859. Had this alteration, and that of 1860–61 not taken place, the amount “received” in the latter year would have been 5,531,000 l.

A COMMITTEE of Justices appointed under the County Rates Act 15 & 16 Vict., cap. 81, procured returns from the overseers of the poor of the several parishes of the value of property therein liable to be assessed to the county rate, and having examined the overseers and other persons with reference to such returns and the property therein mentioned and described, and having ascertained as near as possible at what sums the various descriptions of property would let for by the year without deductions, they took the amount thus ascertained as the rack rent or gross, from which they made the following deductions; viz.—

From land	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	5 l. per cent.
Tithe rent-charge	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	25 l. „
Houses and other buildings	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	20 l. „

In some instances the committee found the rateable value of the parish, as stated in the return of the overseers, so nearly agreeing with the sums ascertained by them, after making the above deductions, that they took such rateable value as the basis for the county rate.

The sums thus ascertained were fixed by the committee as the basis for the county rate. They are as follows:—

St. Paul, Deptford	83,000
St. Nicholas, Deptford	20,000
Greenwich	125,300
Lee	38,930
Lewisham	140,300
Kidbrook	8,600
Charlton	35,000
Woolwich	83,000
Eltham	16,000
Mottingham	1,650
Plumstead	43,700

With reference to St. Nicholas, Deptford, Kidbrook, Mottingham and Woolwich, the committee found, on comparing the county rate basis, as fixed in 1856, with the amounts of the poor rates and the property tax assessments, that there was no necessity for altering such basis.

N. B.—I am not certain whether some of the parishes named in the return are not without the area mentioned.

Maidstone,
22 April 1862.

Joseph Harrison,
Clerk to the County Rate Basis Committee.

SURREY.

THE only knowledge I have of the Basis of the County Rate and the amounts charged on each parish is from the enclosed copy. I am directed, from time to time, to receive the total amount charged on each Union or Place. The Magistrates, with the assistance of the Clerk of the Peace, made out the Basis. The Basis enclosed was not in operation in 1860; the amount then collected, at 1*d.* in the pound, was 11,699*l.* 9*s.* 11*d.*, but of the particulars of it I have no copy.

Edward Kerrick.

Arnolds, Dorking, 10 April 1862.

A BASIS or STANDARD for fair and equal COUNTY RATES, under the Provisions of the Act 15 & 16 Vict. c. 81, allowed and confirmed by the Court, at the General Quarter Session of the Peace, holden in and for the County of Surrey, on Tuesday the 1st day of January 1861.
